ASKS TRUSTEE BE NAMED FOR "LEMKE FUND"

Attorney General Johnson Would Have Treasurer Steen
Control It

ALLEGES FUND MISUSED

Charges in Suit Begun Here that Portions of Fund Were Misapplied by Lemke

Charges that former Attorney General William Lemke applied portions of the so-called "Lemke Fund" to "other purposes and other uses not intended by the donors, and to his own personal and private uses, purposes and ends," and that the Fargo Courier-News "did not up to and including the 11th day of February, 1921, deposit all the collections theretofore received by it in the said Lemke Fund," and that "the said Fred Wing (former business manager of the Courier-News), on information and belief, as this plaintiff alleges, appropriated and converted to other uses and purposes than those intended by the donors," are made by Attorney General Sveinbjorn Johnson in a suit filed in the Burleigh county district court today.

The attorney general asks the court to declare a trust existed in the fund with the State of North Dakota as the beneficiary, and that the treasurer of the state be made custodian of the unexpended portion of the fund to be expended as provided in the trust.

The attorney general alleges that there are several thousand dollars of unpaid bills, incurred by the former attorney general, which should be paid out of the "Lemke Fund" as directed by the donors.

Mr. Johnson does not ask that he be given control of the fund, but suggests that the state treasurer be named to execute the provisions of the trust.

The "Lemke Fund" controversy has been in progress for some time. The Courier-News has attacked the attorney general in the matter, and has declared a fight would be made against his action.

DEFENDANTS NAMED

The suit is brought against William Lemke, The Courier-News Publishing Company a corporation; F. W. Cathro, Fred Wing, and the State of North Dakota doing business as the Bank of North Dakota.

The complaint sets out that the "Lemke Fund" was collected through the Courier-News for the purpose of providing funds for Mr. Lemke to use in prosecuting railroad rate cases, and that the purpose was so stated in the Courier-News when it appealed for funds. The appeal for funds is set out, with Lemke's statement he could not otherwise fight the rate cases.

The attorney general sets out that it is his information and belief that the contributions to the fund were not less than $14,000, and that up to and including Feb. 11, 1921, the Courier-News had deposited in the Bank of North Dakota the sum of $5,432.82 collected for the fund. A deposit slip was issued to William Lemke.

The complaint charges that not all money collected was deposited, and reads:

"That the said defendant, the Courier-News, did not up to and including the 11th day of February, 1921, deposit all the collections theretofore received by it in the said Lemke Fund for the purpose heretofore described; that the said defendant, the Courier-News Publishing Company, has at all times refused, neglected and wholly failed to account for any further receipts for the purposes herein set forth, although the said Courier-News Publishing Company, the defendant herein, has received for said fund, and for the purposes herein set forth, from various donors, citizens of this state, large sums; and that the Courier-News has wholly failed, refused and neglected to turn over to the plaintiff, or the present attorney general, or to any other source the balance to be used for the purpose for which it was given."

CUSTODY OF FUND

The complaint charges that F. W. Cathro, former director-general and manager of the Bank of North Dakota, a short time after a deposit was made in the bank, "took personal charge and custody of said trust fund, the exact amount being unknown to this plaintiff, and the records relating thereto, and that the said defendants herein last mentioned have at all times refused and neglected to account for such portion taken."

The complaint charges that Fred Wing "on information and belief, as this plaintiff alleges, appropriated and converted to other uses than those intended by the donors and contemplated by the trust as hereinbefore alleged, a large portion of the said fund, and that the said Fred Wing has refused and neglected at all times to account for such money and such fund, and the portion thereof converted by him as hereinbefore alleged, to other uses and purposes than those intended by the trust, to-wit: to the uses and purposes of the defendant herein, the Courier-News Publishing Company, a corporation, of which said Fred Wing was manager at all times herein mentioned."

OTHER CHARGES

It is charged that "the defendants, William Lemke, F. W. Cathro, Fred Wing, and the Courier-News Publishing Company, have by common agreement, and by concerted action, fraudulently conspired together for the purpose of preventing a disclosure of the

HARDING URGES THAT PERSONNEL OF U. S. NAVY BE KEPT AT 80,000

Washington, Feb. 25.—President Harding is understood to have told Republican members of the house naval committee at a White House conference today that while he felt some reduction should be made in the naval personnel the total number of enlisted men ought not to be cut under 80,000.

The president also is said to have strongly urged legislation for conversion of two battle cruisers into airplane carriers.

While the question as to whether the 540 members of the first year class at Annapolis, to be graduated in June, should be commissioned, was not considered in detail, it was stated that the president advocated a small reduction in the number of men to be admitted to the academy each year in the future.

ACCUSE JUDGE ROBINSON

Supreme Court Takes Petition
Presented for Filing Under Advisement

A complaint and petition, unprecedented in judicial history, was presented for filing in the supreme court today against Supreme Court Justice J. E. Robinson by members representing the Fourth Judicial Bar association.

The lawyers complain of actions of Judge Robinson alleging he had adopted an unseemly attitude toward representatives of the bar before the court, had published judicial decisions in advance and that he had used objectionable language. The lawyers ask other members of the court to restrain him.

When the petition was presented for filing in supreme court it was taken to the chief justice, who because it was then about 11:45 A. M. decided to take the matter up in conference this afternoon. The court was expected to decide whether it would entertain the petition.

The prayer of the petition asks:

1. That the court should take judicial notice of all the charges and specifications brought against the defendant.
2. That the court appoint a day and hour when the respondent "should be ordered to show cause before it why the prayer of the plaintiffs shall not be granted and that upon said hearing this court order that hereafter the respondent be restrained perpetually and as long as he is a member of this court from any further acts or utterances enumerated in the plaintiffs' complaint."
3. That he "conduct himself in a proper and dignified manner while in the court room and in conformity with the usual rules and practices of the court."
4. That he "refrain from further comment either on or off the bench regarding litigated cases before the court and that he desist from writing or publishing any articles or comments thereon."
5. That he "refrain at all times hereafter from using any insulting, abusive, discourteous or improper language to counsel appearing before this court."
6. That he hereafter "conduct himself in conformity with the usual practices of judges holding a like position."
7. That the court "hereafter expunge from its records all its indecent, improper, abusive, vile or objectionable language or utterances which the respondent may use in his opinions and perpetually restrain him from writing, publishing, uttering or promulgating the same either by writing, printing or word of mouth."

LLOYD GEORGE, POINCARÉ, MEET

Bogone, France, Feb. 25.—Premier Poincaré and Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain were to meet this afternoon for their first interview on the subject of the coming international economic and financial conference.

The conference will begin at 3 p. m. Genoa is receiving less and less mention as the site for the international conference and the impression is gaining ground that the premiers may decide it is inadvisable to hold a meeting in Italy.

2 TREATIES NOT OPPOSED

No Dissenting Vote in Foreign Relations Committee on Naval Limitation

Washington, Feb. 25.—The four-power Pacific treaty together with its supplements and a reservation on the naval limitation and submarine treaties were ordered favorably reported by the senate foreign relations committee today.

The reservation attached by the committee to the four-power pact embodies the compromise suggested after conferences with President Harding and declares that nothing in the treaty shall be construed as forming an "alliance." It was approved by a ten to three vote.

Also by a division of ten to three, with Senator Borah, Idaho, and Johnson, California, Republicans, and Shields, Democrat, Tennessee, voting in the negative, the four-power treaty then was ordered reported to the senate.

The vote by which the naval limitation and submarine treaties were favorably reported, was unanimous.

GOVERNOR ALSO POINTS TO NECESSITY OF IMMEDIATE EMERGENCY STOCK APPROPRIATION

Early enactment of the $5,000,000 bill to provide loans for seed and feed is urged by Governor R. A. Nestos in telegrams to the three North Dakota representatives in the lower house of Congress. The bill, introduced by Senator McCumber, was passed by the senate yesterday and now goes to the house for consideration.

The Governor in his message yesterday said that enactment of the seed and feed loan bill is extremely urgent for the relief of farmers, particularly in the western part of the state, and that the $1,000,000 emergency appropriation for livestock as provided in the $5,000,000 bill, is necessary in order to save many head of stock. Delay means great losses, the Governor said.

Governor Nestos also telegraphed C. T. Jaffray of Minneapolis, representative of the War Finance Corporation, who went to Washington to discuss means by which that body would aid in relieving the situation, and gave him assurance that the county commissioners and other officials will cooperate to see that any federal money made available is applied where it will do the most good. Data desired by Jaffray was dispatched.

SALES TAX IS REJECTED FOR RAISING BONUS

Question is Again Before Members of Entire House Committee

Washington, Feb. 25.—Failure of the special sub-committee of the Republican members of the house ways and means committee to approve any provisions for financing the soldiers' bonus after rejecting the sales tax proposal by a vote of 7 to 2 had placed the question again today in the hands of the entire majority membership of the committee for further study of the situation. In addition to the vote against the sales tax, a sub-committee was understood to have gone on record yesterday, 5 to 4, in favor of reporting out a bonus bill without any provision for raising the revenue.

The majority members of the committee will not meet again until next Thursday, having adjourned yesterday after receiving the report of the sub-committee, to permit study of the whole question.

The sentiment of the majority members was said by some to favor ratification of the sub-committee, barring unforeseen developments before Tuesday.

MANDAN ROAD IS OPENED

Bob Loubek and Others Send
Big Truck and Car Through The Snow

A road to Mandan was opened yesterday afternoon through the entrance of R. B. Loubek, of Bismarck, Glen Louie and Honus Wetzstein, of Mandan, and others.

A big four-wheel drive Winther truck, provided by the R. B. Loubek Motor company, was sent through to break the road from Mandan here, with Glen Louie at the wheel. The truck plowed through the snow, running through drifts which were five feet deep in places, and scattering snow in all directions in the long pull over the road. Mr. Loubek then drove an E-vex touring car over the road, also plowing through heavy drifts. After the truck and touring car broke the road, other vehicles followed, and the road was passable today.

It was a big job to break the road, and proved welcome to many persons who wished to go to Mandan or come from there by automobile.

The penitentiary road also is open. Warden Stair put a big grader plow, with ten horses pulling it, on the road immediately after the big snow. He also opened up Sixth and Seventh streets to the capitol with the penitentiary outfit. Prisoners shoveled snow off the walks to the capitol.

Swedish mothers put money into their children's first bath to bring future wealth.

MRS. SLATTERY PIONEER HERE, PASSES AWAY

Resident of City for Half Century
Passes Away After Long Illness

SAW MANY CHANGES HERE

Mrs. M. P. Slattery, for half a century a resident of Bismarck, passed away last evening at 7:50 at her home, 522 Second street. While her illness was of long duration, her death comes as a shock to the community.

Mrs. Slattery during her long life in the city was beloved by all who knew her and will be mourned by a host of friends and neighbors. Her life was a beautiful one of service and love. Each day saw some kindly deed done to some one in sorrow or distress.

All during her suffering she was cheerful and patient and always had a pleasant greeting for all who called, also showing unequal consideration for those about her.

Mrs. Slattery was born in 1850 in Cottersburg, Pa. She was the widow of the late M. P. Slattery, and came to Bismarck in 1872.

Many changes have taken place during her residence here and she has seen the little frontier village of Bismarck grow to a prosperous city. Like other pioneers she helped build the structure of community life. Her neighborliness extended over the entire town and Mrs. Slattery's kindness and charity were known to all in that earlier day when we were more dependent upon one another.

Those surviving are Daniel M. Slattery, Mrs. Marie de Zychlinski, Fanny Slattery, Ann Slattery; eleven grand children, and several brothers and sisters.

Mrs. Slattery was a member of St. Mary's Pro-Cathedral and funeral services will be held from the church at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

THREE ENDORSED FOR HIGH COURT

Judge Nuessle of This City
Urged by Lawyers

The Fourth District Bar Association, in meeting here, recommended District Judge W. L. Nuessle, of Bismarck, A. G. Burr, of Rugby and D. B. Holt, of Fargo, for the supreme bench of the state. The action, it was said, was not intended to limit the lawyers in the association to three men who might possibly be candidates, but to place the associations O. K. on names which were suggested in the meeting.

About 40 lawyers of Bismarck, Jamestown and other towns in the Fourth Judicial district were present at the meeting.

CONFESSES HE KILLED CHUM

Youth Admits Slaying While Being Brought Back

Milwaukee, Wis. Feb. 25.—Frederick L. McBridge confessed this morning on a train speeding from Akron O. where he was arrested Thursday, that he killed Edwin Thielens of Bismarck, Wis., his 21-year-old chum, on the afternoon of Nov. 20, according to Jefferson county officials who today returned with the prisoner.

According to the alleged confession Thielens was slain as he was driving his car along the country road near East Troy where McBridge's fiancée lived. The confession, it is alleged, was made in the presence of officials and a newspaper man.

JURY TAKES BUT ONE BALLOT IN FINDING GUMMER TO BE GUILTY OF SLAYING 18-YEAR-OLD MARIE WICK

Judge Cooley Tells Jury it is "Righteous" Verdict—Andy Brown, Gummer's Roommate, is Arrested on Same Charge Following Reading of Verdict in Gummer's Case—Gummer to be Sentenced to Life Imprisonment in Penitentiary at Bismarck.

Valley City, Feb. 25.—After the conviction at 12:40 a. m. today of William Gummer on the charge of murder in the first degree in connection with the slaying of Miss Marie Wick, at Fargo, June 7, last, Andy Brown, Gummer's roommate, was arrested on a charge of first degree murder.

Brown, arraigned before a justice this morning, asked time in which to consult an attorney and his hearing was fixed for 10 a. m. Tuesday. Brown was remanded to the custody of the sheriff without bail.

Gummer, declared guilty by the jury that was out from 5:20 p. m. to 12:40 a. m. today, will be sentenced by Judge Charles M. Cooley, to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary, that being the maximum penalty imposed in this state.

Judge Cooley, thanking the jury for its service, congratulated the members on returning what he termed a "righteous" verdict.

BROWN GUMMER'S PAL

Brown, held as a witness since Sept. 24 last, was in the Fargo hotel of which Gummer was night clerk, when Miss Wick, 18, of Grygla, Minn., was choked, gagged, tied to a bed, assaulted and afterwards beaten to death with a fire hose nozzle, was taken to Fargo early today and placed in the Fargo jail.

Gummer showed absolutely no emotion as the verdict was read by Judge Cooley and he left the courtroom with a smile.

Twenty minutes later Sheriff Larson said the convicted man was asleep.

SLOPE FAIR TO BE INCREASED TO FOUR DAYS

Officers are Selected at Annual Meeting Held in Mandan
Last Night

The annual Missouri Slope fair will be increased from a three-day to a four-day exposition and program and will be held Monday to Thursday, inclusive, Aug. 28-31, according to a decision reached by the board of directors last night in Mandan.

John Dawson, of Strain, was re-elected president; Dr. A. O. Henderson, Mandan, vice president, and J. I. Rovig, of Mandan, as secretary.

They adopted a resolution providing for a lease of the grounds to any organization, association, or persons desiring the same on a basis of 10 per cent of the gate receipts. This is especially aimed to provide for the leasing of the stock sales building and runs for use as a boxing arena. Several additions, including new washrooms, etc., hospital quarters and nurses headquarters will be built.

Neither of Gummer's parents were in the court room when the verdict that condemned their son to the imprisonment was reported.

They had attended all sessions of the trial.

It is understood the jury voted first on a verdict of guilty, with unanimous ballot.

The second ballot was on the degree and the result was unanimous.

A "clincher" ballot was taken and less than an hour after the jury had retired the result had been established.

Will Appeal Case.

The jury, however, remained out until 12:30 A. M. before advising bailiffs it was ready to report.

Ten minutes later the verdict was read in court.

Judge Cooley refused to grant a motion of the counsel for the defense for a stay of sentence pending appeal, allowing only the statutory period of two days.

W. H. Barnett, chief counsel for Gummer, said the case would go to the supreme court.

W. C. Green, state's attorney of Cass county, prosecutor of the case, declared his complete satisfaction at the verdict.

"I have always felt that we had the right man and the fact that the jury agreed so early in its deliberations is doubly pleasing," he said.

The slaying of Marie Wick at a hotel in Fargo in June, 1921, for which William Gummer, the hotel clerk, was held, created a sensation in the northwest and city and county officials characterized the crime as one of the most brutal ever committed in this section.

The body of Miss Wick, who was 18 years old, was found in room No. 30 of the Prescott Hotel about 7 a. m. June 7, after she had registered at the hotel the previous night. She was on her way to Pettibone, N. D., from her home in Grygla, Minn., to spend a vacation with an aunt, and had stopped in Fargo to make train connections.

Gagged with parts of the bed clothing and trussed to the bed with blood-soaked pillow cases, investigation showed that the girl had been attacked before being beaten to death with the nozzle of a fire hose. She had been dead from four to six hours, according to Dr. P. H. Burton, county physician, who made the examination.

Authorities immediately plunged into the work of attempting to find the slayer who apparently left no clues, and after eight days of investigation Gummer was arrested June 15 on a charge of murder in the first degree on complaint of William Green, state's attorney for Cass county.

Gummer, who is 23 years old and the son of a farmer living near Mayville, N. D., strongly maintained his innocence, but after the state at a preliminary hearing had submitted what it termed "incriminating evidence," he was ordered bound over to the Cass county district court for trial in November.

When his case came up at the November term of county court, Gummer, through his attorneys, asked for a change of venue, claiming that prejudice was so great in Fargo that selection of an impartial jury would be virtually impossible. He was granted the change by Judge C. N. Cooley of the county district court and the case ordered transferred to the Barnes county district court at Valley City to be heard during the January term. The case was expected to be the first heard from the Barnes county docket early in January.

Preliminary June 29.

The hotel clerk's preliminary hearing began June 29, after having been postponed from June 21 at the request of the state, and ended after four days when he was ordered bound over for trial before a coroner's verdict was returned holding him responsible for the slain girl's death.

The verdict reached by the coroner's jury, withheld until after the preliminary hearing, was that Gummer was guilty of the murder of Marie Wick.

ICE CHAMPS WILL RACE AT CHICAGO

Leading Juvenile Skaters of Twelve Cities Will Compete For National Honors, Much Glory and Many Medals

By ROY GIBBONS
Chicago, Feb. 24.—There's a big stack of gold, silver and bronze medals waiting for lucky winners among the six picked schoolboy skating teams representing as many cities who will clash here in the first national scholastic skating meet, February 25.

Squads of 18 boys each, recruited from grammar and high schools, are coming to Chicago on that date from Cleveland, New York, Milwaukee and Detroit.

Plans are all set here to make the event "a hot time in the old town on that night and for several nights previous" with big parades, concerts and general festivities all on hand to contribute their share of cheer to the youngsters.

It is to be "Boys' Day," says Mayor William Hale Thompson, under whose direction and auspices the meet was called.

"We're going to take advantage of the occasion by showing these younger citizens from other cities just what a fine host Chicago can be once it spreads itself."

In all, there will be about 100 entrants who will compete in the eighth, the quarter, the half, the mile and relay programs.

The visiting teams are coming here as challengers in an attempt to retrieve the national intercity scholastic championship claimed by the Chicago team owing to its series of victories through the east last winter.

The matches will start at 2 o'clock in Garfield park with the entrants graded off into five classes: novices and grades A, B, C and D.

Besides the purely speed events the relay races hold out much interest to devotees.

Mayors from several of the visiting cities will be here in person to make up the committees for reception and awards.

Says Mayor Thompson:
"Tell all the boys to come and come early. The longer they stay the better I'll like it. And tell them to be sure and have a good time when they get here. And I want each one to see me in my office to shake hands."

GOLF GAME IS HARDEST TO MASTER

Most Beginners Start to Play With That Impression, Which Professional Stars Claim Is Great Mistake to Make

Golf has generally been considered the hardest of all games to master.

Does such an impression do the game an injustice? Does that viewpoint tend to make the efforts of the beginner all the more difficult?

At a recent meeting of a number of professional golf players in New York, it was very good fortune to hear this question thoroughly thrashed out.

A great number of the best players in the country do not agree with the statement that golf is the most difficult of all games to master.

Don't get the impression that any of them regard it as an easy game to learn. Far from it. However, the consensus of the golfers I heard discussing the question, was that the game was not nearly so hard to master as the beginner really thinks it is.

Most players take up the golf game with the wrong impression.

They start out believing that to play good golf one must be a specialist, and give up much of his time to the game.

They start out with a number of peculiar theories, the result of perhaps years of gossip they have heard or golfers disseminate. They all start, feeling they are taking up a game that only a very few ever master.

They are in the wrong frame of mind from the very outset. When one starts to play tennis, handball, or any of the other sports he doesn't have the impression that he is trying to master a game in which only a few become expert.

Perhaps no one feature of golf is overdone more than the follow through idea. The beginner in golf has seen thousands of pictures showing the finish of this or that golfer's swing. He has heard time and again that a golfer doesn't get anywhere unless he has the old follow through to his swing.

Golfers Start Out Wrong
With a great many people the sole thought when they start to play golf is how the stick should be when they finish their swing. That is one of the hardest features the instructor has to overcome.

In baseball when a player catches a fly ball he doesn't pay any attention to the position of his feet, hands or body. He simply keeps his eye on the ball, knowing that if he judges the

HOLDS FEATHERWEIGHT TITLE TEN YEARS

Winning a championship title in any branch of sport is one thing, holding it is another.

On February 22, 1912, Johnny Kilbane won the featherweight title from Abe Attell at Vernon, California.

Kilbane has held the title ever since, and on the twenty-second of this month celebrated the tenth anniversary of lifting the crown. No other fighter under the Marquis of Queensbury rules can boast of such a record.

A year after winning the title from Abe Attell, Kilbane defended it against Johnny Dundee. The bout went the limit, 20 rounds, and was declared a draw by Referee Charley Epton.

Says Mayor Thompson:
"Tell all the boys to come and come early. The longer they stay the better I'll like it. And tell them to be sure and have a good time when they get here. And I want each one to see me in my office to shake hands."

When a batter swings at the ball, he gives no thought as to how he will look when he finishes his swing. His main object is to keep his eye on the ball and hit it properly. If he does that his bat will assume its proper position at the finish of the swing.

The follow through idea is really considerable of a joke with most of the professionals. They know that if the eye is kept on the ball and the swing properly done until it meets the ball, that the rest will follow.

In golf, the proper swing is the thing that matters most. Concentrate on hitting the ball in a proper manner. Don't take the eye off the ball to follow its flight before the club actually comes into contact with it.

If a player gets into such a habit he isn't going to get many thrills out of his drives. The ball isn't going to go very far.

Keep Your Eye on Ball
The big thing is to hit the ball properly. What is done before the ball is hit is far more important than how your club and body look when you finish. First hit the ball properly and the finish will be in keeping with the hit.

That in substance is the way the game's leading professionals view the thought that golf is the most difficult of all games to master.

Which narrows it all down to the mental attitude of the player. Just make up your mind that there is nothing mysterious about the game. Follow the instructions offered by the professional to the letter, and don't let the impression you are master of the game after a few lessons.

And, of all things, forget the thought that you must follow through. Do the first part of the swing correctly and the proper follow through will naturally result.

Between halves he was told of the difference in atmosphere. In the second half the passes went better for he threw with less force than he ever

ENDURANCE REQUIRED FOR THIS

Many of the sports at the winter carnival at Banff, Canada, furnished more thrills than the snowshoe races, but none of them required more endurance. This shows the finish of the one-mile race.

That is the closest Kilbane has come to losing his crown in 10 years. The Dundee bout was a very even affair, and Kilbane was fortunate to be favored by the referee's decision.

In 1916 George Chaney loomed up as the fighter to dethrone Kilbane. His record of knockouts caused fight experts to make him a favorite over the champion. Kilbane knocked Chaney out in three rounds to the great surprise of the pugilistic world.

On September 17, 1921, Danny Frush met Kilbane for the title. So confident was Frush of victory that he took on the bout for merely a guarantee of training expenses. Kilbane received $60,000.

During the football season, in reading the accounts of the big games on the coast, it was not at all uncommon to read about many a forward pass that traveled 40 or more yards.

In the east a 50-yard pass is regarded as most remarkable. Muller of California thinks nothing of hurling the old football through the air for 50 yards.

A prominent eastern coach who saw California trim Ohio State, and who also attended the Washington and Jefferson game in which California was held to a tie, offers a very interesting and plausible explanation for the long passes that are made in coast football. Here is his line of reasoning.

"There is a great difference in the atmosphere on the coast as compared with the east. The air is light and lacks resistance. A ball will travel much farther under such conditions."

"When Ohio State and California played on New Year's Day, 1921, Workman, Ohio State's quarterback, was out-throwing his receivers all through the first half. He could not understand it."

"Workman was putting no more 'stuff' behind the ball than back east and still the ball was traveling from 5 to 10 yards farther than it ever did before for him and his receivers could not get to the ball."

"Between halves he was told of the difference in atmosphere. In the second half the passes went better for he threw with less force than he ever

While new developments come thick and fast in the west, nothing has come out of the east. It doesn't seem possible that all the professionalism in college football is confined to the west.

One of these days the secret will break loose in one of the eastern institutions. When it does, things will happen. Money has just as much fascination east as west. The moral fiber of the college athlete in the east is no stronger than in the west.

For years the amateur in sport has been a joke. Possibly it will continue to be that way. College restrictions are so severe, they seem to invite deception on the part of the athletes.

Every so often every sport needs a thorough cleansing. It seems that such a condition now exists in college athletics. Things had to break sooner or later. It is a good thing for the sport that Illinois and Notre Dame started a house cleaning.

Athletics in the colleges have developed into a big amusement enterprise. A readjustment of conditions is the only answer.

The champion bag punchers rarely have any particular standing as a boxer. The strong man in a circus is a joke when they take up the wrestling game, or boxing.

Others insist that Kirkwood, because of the many trick shots in his repertoire, has a number of ways of playing the same shot. In competition, he is often undecided as to what style to use, with the result that he usually selects the wrong one.

I have watched Kirkwood on several occasions give his exhibition of trick golf. One day I was in company with two of the country's leading professionals. Their observations on Kirkwood's playing interested me.

Kirkwood's bag of golf tricks, however, added something new to the game. The stunt will always be a big money getter. It is hardly possible that after spending so many years to perfect the trick game, that he will give it up in hope that it may aid him to win a championship.

The consensus was that Kirkwood, in playing many a trick shot, was forced to take a stance contrary to the right way of playing the shot, if no trick result was desired.

The "pros" figure that this constant changing of style was found to affect its rhythm and steadiness. They claimed it was certain to react on his form, and with golfers form is everything.

Johnny Buff is the bantam champion. However, if he ever meets Pal Moore to a decision, there is liable to be a change in that division. Moore was the unanimous choice of all the critics in the Milwaukee bout between those two fighters.

Who is the middleweight champion, Bryan Downey or Johnny Wilson?

Wilson is still carrying around a badly damaged crown. He is generally recognized as the champion because his hand-picked referee said Downey fouled him in their Cleveland bout.

However, I will take Bryan Downey for mine. Incidentally I believe that fight fans all over the country take the same view. The record of the two fighters during the last six months would win popular approval for Downey, all other things being equal, which they are not.

The public likes champions who fight. Wilson hasn't fought any since his bout at Jersey City with Downey. There are of course two reasons for his failure to engage in a bout that would risk his title. In the first place Wilson doesn't care much about fighting. In the second place there are few places that want to see him fight. He is under suspension in practically every state where fighting is permitted.

Downey, on the other hand, is always willing to meet any fighter who fights the approval of a worthwhile promoter. In the last two months he has met two of the toughest boys in the middleweight division, Happy Littleton and Young Fisher.

In knocking out Littleton in five rounds, Downey accomplished a feat far too difficult for Bob Roper, Mike Gibbons, Chuck Wiggins, Harry Greb and a number of others.

Downey is a fighter, not a boxer, yet is really clever in his own peculiar way. During the last three months he has greatly perfected his left hand. His left jab now carries with it a snap that does much to upset his opponent and make him a mark for Downey's right cross which packs a real knockout kick.

There is one thing about Downey that makes a hit with the fight fans. He seldom disappoints. If a bout in which he is one of the principals fails to please, blame can never be attached to Downey as he is always trying.

Downey has just one ambition in life. He seeks to have the world recognize him as the middleweight champion. He realizes that at present his claim to the title is rather clouded. He also knows the only way to have the public recognize him as the real thing is to fight his way to it.

RECORDS ARE ONLY PART OF SPORT

Walter Johnson Says Success of His Team Always Came Before Any Effort on His Part to Break Any Records

BY WALTER JOHNSON.
In hanging out the many records that you have made, particularly your different strike-out performances, have you ever given a thought to the fact while pitching?

Records have never entered into my pitching in the slightest. That is as far as actually trying to create the record.

Nature endowed me with a fine physique and armed me with a great fast ball. I have simply pitched to the best of my ability, and the records that are credited to me simply happened.

It is all very nice to break some record that has been standing for years, but I don't think a pitcher should ever set such a happening as his goal.

The big thing is to always give your best efforts to your club. Try your best to win, regardless of how you pitch. I get a great deal more satisfaction winning a ball game 10 to 9, in which I have been hit hard, rather than losing a 1 to 0 affair, in which I have pitched well-nigh perfect ball.

Without any ego, I am positive that there have been two or three occasions during my career where I might have broken the strike-out record had I gone the limit to the very end.

I recall one game in which I had 10 strike-outs in five innings. I was at my best. In the sixth inning my club got me a six-run lead and I eased up, getting only two strike-outs in the last four innings.

In the final game of this year, when I struck out 10 of the Philadelphia club, I believe I could have broken the record of 16 strike-outs, had I been pressed.

In that game five of the strike-outs came in succession in the third and fourth innings. I won that game, 11 to 6. Had it been a close affair, I feel positive I could have broken the record, as my speed was terrific.

However, when my team got me a good lead, I eased up, thereby losing a chance to break the record.

I feel that every pitcher should subordinate himself to his club. He should ease up the moment he has a big lead, regardless of his chance to break some record.

Some pitchers make the mistake of going the limit regardless of the score. Such methods work against the best interests of your team, as well as yourself. It is a waste of power.

JOHNSON HAS NO USE FOR BEAN BALL
Famous Pitcher Has Never Resorted to Unfair Methods Over the Batter for Achieving His Remarkable Success

BY WALTER JOHNSON
What do you think of the system resorted to by some pitchers of throwing the ball close to the batter's head in an effort to intimidate him and thereby make him much easier to pitch to?

"During the batter off," as such a practice is called by us players, has never had the slightest appeal to me.

During my entire career as a pitcher I have always been blessed with good control. It didn't take the batters long to realize that intimidating the batsman was not part of my program. When they stepped to the plate against me they did so with confidence because they knew I would never resort to such tactics.

Players on my team, after some ordinary hitting would get one safe, would walk over to the pitcher's box and say to me:

"Dust a few of those fellows off Walter. Don't let them get a toe hold. Throw a scare into them. If I had your stuff that lucky stiff wouldn't make a foul off me."

My teammates had no desire that I try to hit anyone, they simply thought I was giving the batter too great an advantage because he knew I wouldn't resort to unsportsmanlike conduct.

Ever since I have started pitching I have always thought if I couldn't win without throwing at the batter's head, I would quit.

A few years ago when I was having my troubles winning with my usual regularity, some of the boys insisted now was the time for me to dust a few of them off. They figured I was slipping and that I could prolong my career by such tactics.

There was never a fear on my part that I might hit a batter. With the great control that I have always had, I could have intimidated the batter without entailing any danger.

I have never used the "bean ball," simply because I don't believe in such tactics to win. After all, there is something besides mere victory in sport, the spirit of fair play.

A QUERY A DAY

There is a runner on first and one out. On the first pitch to the next batter the runner on first starts to steal second. The umpire, working close behind the catcher, interferes with the throw of the catcher to second. The ball goes to the outfield. The runner, who had started for second, continues on his way to third and is thrown out at that base. What is the proper ruling?

When the umpire, working back of the plate, interferes with the catcher in making a throw to catch a baserunner, the ball becomes dead. The runner, who was retired at third, should have been sent back to his original base, first, as no base can be run on such an interference play.

24 SENATORIAL- VACANCIES OPEN TO COMPETITION

Hot Time Looked For In The June Primaries—15 Held
By Leaguers

LIEDERBACH AMONG THEM

Twenty-four places in the North Dakota state senate will be open to competition of candidates in the June primaries. Just what party badge it will be possible for a candidate to find and retain until the votes are counted seems to be a matter of much more doubt. Well informed politicians are beginning to express the opinion, however, that as far as state offices are concerned there will be not more than two tickets in the field, but they refuse to make a guess as to the possibility or probability of party regularity during the early scramble.

A glance at the directory of the last session shows that the men whose four years' term of office ends this year were in 15 instances classed as Non-partisan while the political affiliations of the others were not listed. Of the men retaining their seats in the senate and who will, in the nature of things, be present at the beginning of the next session, the directory lists 11 as Non-partisan.

The most notable name of the 24 whose names must seek re-election or pass from the activities of the senate is that of A. A. Liederbach of the 48th district, made up of Mercer, Oliver and Dunn counties. Mr. Liederbach, while for the past several months in California, is the chairman of the executive committee of the Nonpartisan League, the organization in charge of the activities of the party in the state.

The districts in which elections take place, with the names of the men representing the district in the last legislative session, follows:

- 2 (Part of Ward)—John E. Fleckton, Niobe.
- 4 (Part of Walsh)—P. J. Murphy, Grafton.
- 6 (Part of Grand Forks)—W. S. Whitman, Grand Forks.
- 8 (Trail)—H. H. McNair, Portland.
- 10 (Part of Cass)—A. G. Storstad, Horace.
- 12 (Part of Richland)—E. M. Nelson, Fairmount.
- 14 (Ransom)—Peter A. Berg, Englevalle.
- 16 (Steele and Griggs)—John L. Micklethun, Wimbledon.
- 18 (Cavalier)—W. K. Porter, Calvin.
- 20 (Benson)—W. J. Church, York.
- 22 (Towner)—D. J. Beisel, Newville.
- 24 (LaMoure)—E. A. Bowman, Kulm.
- 26 (Emmons and Kidder)—T. J. Kelsch, Fullerton.
- 28 (Bottineau)—A. M. Hagan, Westhope.
- 30 (Morton)—F. W. Mees, Glen Ulin.
- 32 (Eddy and Foster)—O. H. Olson, New Rockford.
- 34 (Part of McHenry)—E. H. Kendall, Norwich.

JURY TAKES BUT ONE BAL- LOT IN FINDING HOTEL CLERK GUILTY

liminary examination, held Gummer responsible.

At that time Coroner E. F. Moore said the verdict which was returned July 3, after Gummer was bound over for trial, had been previously reached but it was thought advisable not to make it known until after the hearing. Gummer's preliminary hearing, which, according to officials, was to prove that there was probable cause to believe he had committed the murder, ended July 2 without the hotel clerk taking the stand.

At the hearing State's Attorney Green introduced a statement which he alleged Gummer made to him admitting that he had visited the girl's room about 6:30 on the morning of June 7, a half hour before anyone else knew of the crime. Gummer said that Miss Wick had left a call for 6 o'clock and that he made his way into her room with a pass key only after he had failed to receive a response to repeated telephone calls. Shocked and afraid that he might be accused of the crime if he made known his discovery, Gummer said he went back to his desk in the hotel lobby and after waiting 15 minutes informed Fred Lawrence, son of the hotel proprietor, that he was unable to get any response from the occupant of the room. Lawrence, he said, told him to look over the transom, and he then announced his discovery.

Fix Time of Crime
According to the authorities, the time of the crime was fixed at about 4 o'clock on the morning of June 7, through testimony of a chambermaid at the preliminary hearing. The maid, who had a room directly above that occupied by Miss Wick, said that she was awakened at that hour by sounds which she likened to "blows from a baseball bat." She said that she was unable to locate the sounds but declared she heard movements in the room below. Soon afterward, she said, she heard someone leave the room.

Guests at the hotel who occupied rooms next to the death chamber declared that they heard nothing to disturb them at any time during the night.

In addition to the bloodsoaked bed clothing presented at the preliminary hearing, the state also introduced the fire hose nozzle with which it contended the crime was committed and a pair of bloody trousers, found in the basement of the Prescott Hotel about a week after the crime, after that part of the basement had been previously searched thoroughly. Gummer denied that the trousers belonged to him and their ownership was not established.

Nozzle Is Used
The nozzle had been taken from a fire hose in the corridor and after being used to beat Miss Wick about the head, was washed and replaced. Bits of hair and skin still clung to the nozzle when it was brought into the court room, but no finger prints could be obtained from it.

A hatpin, bent in such a manner that it could be slipped through the key hole and used to manipulate the key in the lock from the outside, also was introduced. Investigation had revealed that the door to Miss Wick's room was locked from the inside and that the key was still in the lock when her body was found.

THE INDUSTRIAL AUDIT IS NOW ABOUT FINISHED

Few Audits Have Been More
Thorough Than The One
In Present Case

5 DEPARTMENTS AUDITED

Auditors, working upon the records of the Bank of North Dakota and the various industries under the control of the Industrial Commission expected to complete their work by tonight and return to Minneapolis where the vast amount of material gathered was being reduced into the confines of a final report.

The audit has been exhaustive, and when the report is finally made, state officials expect to have not only an exact statement of the conditions of the bank and the industries but to have the benefit of the deductions of the accountants as to methods of reducing losses or of making earnings larger.

Few audits have been more thorough than the one made in the present case. No effort has been too great to trace each transaction through all of its details. Analysis was made of all parts of the industries including the cost of operation, the relations of salaries to costs, of travel to costs and so on through the long list of details.

The audits were divided into the following:

- The Bank of North Dakota.
- The Farm Loan Association.
- The Home Builders' Association.
- The Mill and Elevator Association.
- The Werner Creamery.

It is conceded that the audit of the bank will show little change from the statements of conditions given out by Mr. Greene since he has been in charge. That the analysis of the deposits and loans made and the interest paid may lead to predictions as to whether the bank may be a continual liability or a possible later asset is also predicted. This department of the report has been the task of a former federal bank examiner now in the employ of the auditing company.

Some interest is also manifested in the completed audit of the Werner Creamery. Books and records of this institution were in such shape it was necessary to call for the records of the companies with which they did business to straighten out the tangle. Only some good luck in the final days of the hunt enabled the auditors to find some of the items.

Another item of interest is the showing the present company will make in the conduct of the Drake mill for the few months it has been under the direction of the present administration with a better business management in charge of its sales policy.

COUNTY AGENT OUT TO OBTAIN HAY FOR STATE

George H. Ilse, of Mandan, Goes to Northern Minnesota to Make Purchase

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 25.—Hundreds of cattle met their death from starvation during the past week in Morton county, while a similar condition prevails throughout the southern part of the Missouri Slope country, was the declaration made here today by County Agent George H. Ilse of Mandan, who is enroute to northern Minnesota in search of hay for farmers of his county.

"We have shipped in 75 carloads of hay this month and have about 60 more cars on the way," said Mr. Ilse. "We will need from a hundred to two hundred more cars to pull through the reduction in freight rates on hay and feed offered by the railways for this district has helped the situation and is saving the farmers about two dollars per ton, the hay costing them from $16 to $19 delivered there."

"The blizzard of the last few days had made the situation more serious, as the branch lines are not running and it is impossible to deliver what little hay has been received for the farmers on these lines. Several farmers who were unable to get money at the banks to purchase feed drove their cattle into town and turned the herds over to the bankers, declaring that they would have to feed them. Cattle are eating bark off the trees, and I saw one farmer grinding willow twigs for cattle feed."

"It is a significant fact that here and there are farmers who are not worrying about the feed situation. Invariably these are individuals who have gotten away from the one crop idea, and who raised a considerable amount of corn, sweet clover, millet or other feed crops last year."

TOWNLEY GIVES CHANGED PLAN

Tells Nebraska Leaguers That Politicians Should be Allowed To Have Offices

"GREEN TIMBER" FAILS

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 25.—In a speech which occupied three hours, A. C. Townley, national president, told the Nebraska Nonpartisan League state convention here that the tactics now pursued by the league make impossible any lasting or substantial victory, and that until the fight can be shifted from the league itself nothing can be won. He said the thing to do is to play practical politics.

He said he was forced to this conclusion by the fact that in the first place, the league cannot win the offices; secondly, if they do win them they cannot hold them, and that lastly "too many rascals and incompetents were put into office by the league."

He said the league began its existence by saying it would have no dealings with the politicians.

"It went out in the woods and got some mighty green timber, some of which afterwards proved pretty rotten, and tried to train it to play politics against professionals," he observed.

Let Politicians Have Offices.

"I have come to this conclusion," said Townley, "that the thing the politicians want most—the offices—is the cheapest thing we can give them. The power of our program is not possession of the offices, but in the minds of the people. So far as I am concerned, the men we brought from the woods as green timber can go back. The league found itself worse off when it got its own men into office because they were utterly untrained, and some of us were unable to train them, because we did not ourselves know practical politics or statecraft."

The speech of Mr. Townley was the feature of the convention. The innovations he proposed occasioned lively comment by delegates following his departure for North Dakota. At a late hour tonight the convention was still in session without having completed its program, most of the evening meeting being taken up by speeches by party leaders.

"All history is a continuous struggle of the ruling classes to maintain the dominance and keep the slave class in subjection. You, the farmers and workers, are the slaves of today. You are ruled by organized wealth," he said.

Experience in North Dakota.
"It is going to be a big job to put these ruling classes out of business and transform the slave class into a ruling class. That never has been done, so far as I know, except in North Dakota, and I'm not so sure it is going to stick there. Our setback there was the result of inexperienced men in the offices that had been operated by politicians, coupled with the fact that 95 per cent of the influences were against us.

"If 85 per cent of the people would become educated to the program of the Nonpartisan League and to the need of its program, its success would be assured," Mr. Townley said. "Ninety-five per cent of the people want to do what we want to do; they want to equalize the distribution of wealth and to assure a more equitable return to the farmers and factory workers for the products of their toil."

WATER COMPANY ASKS INCREASE IN ITS RATES

Asks Suspended 60 Per Cent Increase be Made Temporary and Hearing Held

SAYS EXPENSES HIGHER

Asserts That Company Is Not Making Fair Returns On Its Investment

The Bismarck Water Supply Company today filed a petition with the state railroad commission asking for an increase in rates. Sometime ago a petition was filed by a number of people for a decrease in rates and the company answered. The new petition follows declaration of the railroad commission to dismiss the first action.

The company asks that temporary rates be fixed at the same as those ordered on October 2, 1920, which never became effective, and that the commission increase permanently the rates to such extent as will insure a fair return upon the money invested in accordance with the general principle of the commission which is an 8 per cent return to stockholders.

After setting out its contention the company makes the following petition:

"Your petitioner prays that the board of railroad commissioners fix a hearing hereon and that thereupon it issue an order granting the temporary increase in the rates and rentals as set forth above, pending the completion of the hearing, to be followed by an order granting the establishment of permanent rates set forth above and for such other and further relief as shall be deemed proper by this honorable body."

Want 60 Per Cent Boost Now.

The petition sets out that in the order of Oct. 2, 1920, the commission allowed an increase in rates and hydrant rentals of approximately 60 per cent and requiring certain improvements and betterments to be made by the company. The city of Bismarck appealed from the order to the district court. During pendency of appeal the matter was taken into the supreme court where the supreme court granted a writ of injunction on the ground that the procedure in the case was not in accordance with regulations, not going into the merit of the case. The 60 per cent increase did not become effective.

The petition says that the cost of supplies, materials and labor have so greatly increased as to make the present rates non-compensatory.

That a valuable contract between the company and the Hughes Electric Company, whereby the water company was given a low rate on electric power for the booster pump was abrogated and a higher rate given the electric company.

That large expenditures of money have been made in litigation before the railroad commission in defending the company.

That higher rates are necessary in order to produce a compensatory return.

That because the present rates are insufficient the company is unable to borrow money for the purpose of making improvements.

That the 60 per cent horizontal increase is not sufficient to enable the company to make a fair return, but that it is desired this increase shall be made pending final hearing in the matter.

Expenses Increase 100 Per Cent.

The company maintains that total operating expenses have increased 100 per cent since 1919 while revenue has increased by 7 per cent.

It is claimed that most of the increase in operating expenses is due to orders of the railroad commission over which the company has now control. Among these increases it claims: electric bill increased from $4,052.57 in 1919 to $13,400 in 1922 (estimated); that taxes increased from $4,052.84 in 1919 to $10,600 in 1922 (estimated); that expense for cleaning reservoirs increased from $293.44 in 1919 to $800 in 1922; that legal expenses increased from $1,175 in 1919 to $1,775 in 1922. The total increase on these items is given as $20,021.15. Total expenses in 1919, it is said, amounted to $24,380.83 and it is said the increased expenses nearly equals this amount. Gross revenue, it says, increased from $53,441.16 in 1919 to $56,641.47 in 1922.

To Set Out Side.

It was said by representatives of the company that it plans to make weekly public statements outlining the history and condition of the company, and in these statements it is said the company expects to open its books and records to the public to support the company's declaration that rates are insufficient. It is claimed that a 36 per cent increase in rates would be necessary to provide a return such as is held compensatory by the railroad commission.

OLD-FASHIONED ARMY COOK TO BE CAST ASIDE

Coblenz, Feb. 25—The old time United States army cook who specialized on baked beans and corned "willy" and, in war times in France, became famous in soldier circles for his meal time call of "come and get it," is soon to be an individual of memory only. Modern progress has pushed the old-fashioned army cook aside, and in his place will soon appear a white-aproned chap, with cap to match, skilled in all the arts of the up to date kitchen.

Domestic science is to be made a feature, according to recently formed plans of the American forces in Ger-

A school for cooks and bakers has been established in Coblenz. Even all the mess officers and enlisted men performing the duties of mess sergeants have been ordered to take a course in training. This has been arranged with a view of standardizing and improving the soldiers' messes over which class graduated cooks will reign supreme.

RUSO-JAPANESE WAR TALK GOING ON IN MOSCOW

Leon Trotsky Refers To Menace To Chita From Mongolia, By Japanese

RUSS-U. S. INTERESTS SAME

Moscow, Feb. 25—The possibility of a new Russo-Japanese war, because of mutual encroachments in the Far East, has become a subject of discussion in military circles here because of the shipment of army physicians and large numbers of officers for troop training purposes to Chita (Siberia) and other points. Also troops subject to discharge at the expiration of service terms are being held.

George V. Chitcherlin, Soviet Minister of Foreign Affairs, has sent many notes to the Japanese, none of which appears to evoke an acknowledgment.

Leon Trotsky in his speech at the Ninth All-Soviet congress, plainly stated that Russia could not indefinitely endure the advance of Japanese troops on territory of its ally, the Far Eastern Republic. He had reference, in particular, to the menace to Chita from Mongolia, by Japanese.

It is felt here that Russia will not and cannot enter into any real war with Japan, partly because of the great distance from Moscow and also the lack of food for any large bodies of troops, but that in the spring there may be more advance guard skirmishes.

In the meanwhile, the weapon of Russia will continue to be propaganda against Japanese militarism by working through the Third Internationale among the Socialists and Communists of Japan, Korea, Mongolia and China.

This is the main purpose of the forthcoming Congress here of Far Eastern peoples. Many inspired articles continue to appear in the Moscow press in an effort to show that the interests of Russia and the United States are identical, as related to Japan.

At the Armament Conference in Washington, Baron Shidehara made a statement declaring that Japan had no territorial designs in Russia and giving assurances that Japanese troops would be withdrawn as soon as a stable government could be established there.

Baron Uchida, the Japanese Foreign Minister, had announced to the Japanese Diet a few days before that Japan intended to evacuate Russian territory as soon as guarantees could be given for the safety of the lives and property of their nationals.

No date when this could be accomplished was suggested in the Japanese statement to the Washington conference. Secretary Hughes announced in the conference that these Japanese assurances were taken to mean that Japan did not seek through her military operation in Siberia to impair the rights of the Russian people in any respect.

MAD THAT TIRED, WORN-OUT FEELING

Do you know that "awful tired feeling," languidness, lame or weak back, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints, or rheumatic pains usually indicate kidney trouble? Foley Kidney Pills act promptly and effectively. Mrs. Roberta Lilly, 709 Alton St., Alton, Ill., writes: "For three years I had a tired, worn-out feeling. Various treatments failed. I began to improve on the second dose of Foley Kidney Pills and today I feel like new." Adv.

SOVIET RUSSIA'S ARMY AND NAVY APPROPRIATIONS

Army, According to Latest Reports, Number Over 1,500,000 Men

Moscow, Feb. 25—Soviet Russia's military appropriation for the first nine months of 1922 totals 556,028,069 gold rubles, or about $228,000,000. Its naval appropriations aggregated $36,000,000, bringing the total contemplated expenditures for army and navy to about $264,000,000, according to the budget approved by the recent congress.

This expenditure is based on the present size of the army and navy. The army, according to latest reports, numbers somewhat over 1,500,000 men and the combined strength of the soldiers, the naval personnel and special troops is about 1,700,000.

Food and storage for the army is provided for in an appropriation aggregating about $79,000,000 which is greater than the amount of money America has already given for the relief of famine in the Volga districts and more than the amounts given by all foreign countries to relieve distress in Soviet Russia.

Western soldiers, particularly American soldiers, will be amazed at the low rate of pay for military men. An ordinary soldier's pay is 20,000 rubles a month, which is only about ten cents, or less than the price of a Russian pound of white bread. Captains get the equivalent of about $1.50. Division commanders receive about $8 a month.

Spy System Allowance

Budget figures for the Vecheka, or "Cheka," show that this all-powerful spy system which combines legislative, executive and judicial function all in one, and has been the chief object of attack from abroad, as well as within Russia, is to cost $10,200,000.

The Supreme Economic Council which is endeavoring to reconstruct Russian industry gets $77,000,000; agriculture gets $26,000,000; education $61,000,000, and the department of health $58,000,000.

The contemplated expenditures total 1,877,000,000 gold rubles while the estimated income totals 1,647,000,000 gold rubles leaving a deficit equivalent to about $115,000,000.

SATURDAY EVENING LETTER (By Justice J. E. Robinson.)

February 25, 1922. Time was when Carl Kositzky and I fought a good fight against the unjust taxes. Now he is at the public crib and doth protest against the tax reduction.

Oh dear Kositzky, sweet Kositzky, Oh!

The initiative measures are all for tax reduction. Those taxes are grossly excessive, illegal, unjust, and oppressive. To insist on oppression will not benefit the investors. You all know the story of poor Shylock. By reason of his unjust claim he forfeited his bond for three thousand crowns and half his property, and he was forced to become a Christian. Assuredly the people will unload part of their nefarious tax burdens regardless of any Shylock plea to the contrary. The measures submitted will pass and will reduce the unpaid taxes of the past three years, reduce the assessments, the taxes of this year and give the people relief one year in advance of any relief that might be given by the next legislative assembly. Now is the time we need the relief. Now is the day of salvation. The tax receivers are not in the bread line nor in danger of hunger like the taxpayers. The reduction is a matter of simple justice. Under the bad laws of 1919 the tax commission and tax supervisors made assessments which were three fold that of any former year, and to this about forty per cent was added by the state board of equalization. The same valuation was continued in 1920 and 1921. The result was to permit a threefold increase in the tax levies because in every case the levies are limited to a percent of the valuation. The addition of forty per cent to the huge assessment was for the purpose of boosting the taxes, and not for the purpose of equalizing the assessments. Hence it was not legal. By the constitution it is provided that no tax shall be levied, except in pursuance of law, and every law imposing a tax shall distinctly state the object of the same, to which only it may be applied.

"The legislative assembly shall provide for raising revenue sufficient to defray the expenses of the state for each year, not to exceed in any one year four mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of all taxable property."

This contemplates no tax levies except on property according to an assessed valuation. Hence all the new-fangled tax levies are unconstitutional. As the state tax levy is limited to four mills on the dollar, of course it may not be increased without limit by a dog tax on lawyers, an income tax, a pool hall tax, a motor vehicle tax, a special tax on horses, cows, pigs or lands. On the tax question we have come to the parting of the ways. In North Dakota and in South Dakota the taxes of the past three years have been a monstrosity, an abomination to the Lord. For those three years the taxes on lands and on tenements have been equal the net rental value of the same. After paying interest, repairs, insurance, taxes, running expenses and excessive carrier rates, the landowner has nothing left. The common carrier is assured a net profit of six per cent, while the tolling wealth producer has not a profit of one cent. Surely the tree which bears such evil fruit must be hewn and cast into the fire. Equality is equity. If the class who toil not have a right to a six per cent net profit, the toilers have a right to the same net profit. The safety of the Republic depends on

WHAT PRINCESS MARY WILL WEAR AT ROYAL WEDDING

An evening gown, a street frock and a suit selected from Princess Mary's trousseau and posed on a model. The skirts of the royal bride's outfit follow the trend of the lower hem line and her evening gowns are built on straight lines.

Here are three hats from Princess Mary's wedding outfit, posed on a model. The majority of the hats which the princess selected are small colorful affairs. Invariably, if the background is black, bright flowers are poised against it.

MY MILTON BRONNER

London, Feb. 25.—No fairy princess ever had a more lovely trousseau than that prepared for Princess Mary, England's royal bride, who becomes the wife of Viscount Lascelles February 26.

Her outfit will dominate styles for the next few months.

While the wedding clothes will be symphonies in white and silver, the bulk of her trousseau will be "poems in sweet pea colors."

The sweet pea is the favorite flower of the princess and sweet pea mauves, pinks and blues will predominate in her dresses.

Probably no young girl ever enjoyed shopping more than Princess Mary.

Buying her trousseau has been her first unlimited "splurge," in which she has been allowed to choose as many clothes and as many kinds as she wanted.

Her Wedding Dress

Princess Mary's wedding gown will be a princess gown of cloth of silver, veiled with silver lace embroidered in pearl and silver.

It will have a court train of specially woven English silver-shot white "tulle" satin, embroidered with Indian silver and silk, collared with exquisite lace cascading at each side.

Her wedding slippers, the gift of the queen, are of white satin, with diamond buckles, set in pleating of tulle and chiffon.

Princess Mary will wear, as she drives to Westminster Abbey, a wrap made of the finest Russian ermine.

Many Other Gowns

Princess Mary's going-away frock is of powder blue charmeuse embroidered in long narrow panels from the yoke to the hip in self-colored silk, nearest coral beads and crystals. A sash of blue charmeuse is tied loosely at the side. The wide sleeves are "three-quarter" length. Over this will be worn a moleskin wrap.

One of the bride's evening gowns is of sky-blue satin, chiffon veiled, with diamante shoulder pieces and a diamond ornament on the grille.

A sapphire blue and gold evening gown has a slip of shot-blue and gold tulle, with soft embroidered drapings of blue and gold.

An afternoon gown of black georgette is cut in straight simple lines with double flounces of georgette edged with bands of gold squirrel. The neck is square, the sleeves full. The sleeves are elbow length. There is a swathing sash of georgette.

Frock and Coat

A striking garment is one in dark blue, a velvet ruffe frock and wrap coat. The frock is made in straight simple lines with square neck and three-quarter length sleeves. It is finished at the neck with a gray crepe beaute satin collar and lace vest. The skirt is ornamented with lengthwise tucks and embroidered with gun-metal. The coat is cut with a short front and long back. It has a stand up collar of gray fur with cuffs to correspond, embroidered in diamond signs of gun-metal.

A coat and skirt of French blue velvet is trimmed with ornamental stitching. With it will be worn a tunic of blue crepe georgette, embroidered with blue and white beads.

An afternoon dress in smoke-gray crepe jersey is made on straight lines, ornamented with open work embroidery. On each side of the skirt are knife-pleats, held at the hips with a sash. The long sleeves are embroidered.

Another gown is of soft cream pointed-flare over similar colored crepe-de-chine and may be worn either as an evening or dinner gown. It is sashed at the hips with satin ribbons in pasted tints of pink and blue, held at the side with a cockade. A feature of this dress is the filmy lace, which falls below the hem line in points.

Fawn and Beaver

A coat frock in nut-brown gabardine has a skirt ornamented with English embroidery in shades of fawn and beaver. It is girdled with silk cord. The square collar is edged with beaver.

A navy "sergeant" coat frock is made of this new material that is very fine and light. It is embroidered in royal blue silk and black round braid in twill design. The sleeves are wide. The steel girdle is held with an oxidized jet and steel buckle.

It should be noted that most of the dresses for the princess have been made ankle-length, seven or eight inches off the ground and generally with round neck and low girdle.

The princess has remained faithful to the "jumper" so popular over here. One is made of soft crepe, "Mary blue" and lightly embroidered with blue and white beads. Other jumpers of hand-knitted silk have been bought from the Officers' Families Industries.

Close-Fitting Hats

When it comes to hats Princess Mary has in the main chosen the small close-fitting shapes she has worn since her war-time uniform days. And most of them have silk flowers "as their sole trimming."

One small turban is of gold tissue blended with gorgeous hues. A sapphire blue satin hat is draped with mole lace and shell-pink roses.

Another hat has a Napoleonic front in black satin with a band of mixed flowers across the front, mostly in shades of blue, with a touch of pink.

All the princess' shoes and slippers have heels not higher than 1 3/4 inches. Antelope is the princess' favorite material for afternoon shoes. She has chosen many pairs in gray, brown and white. Some are cut away to show the stocking; others have the Oxford cut and lace up.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

AFTER DEATH

Suppose you and a friend ran away from civilization and built a log cabin in the woods.

After finishing, you'd say: "Well, that's a pretty good job for just the two of us."

Then, turning philosophical, you'd add: "Of course, we have to give some credit to the many men, now dead, who invented axes, saws, hammers and nails for us. Without their efforts, the job would have taken us much longer. In effect, the dead men exercised the same influence as if they were here and helped us."

Look about you and you'll observe that nearly everything you use in daily life is a gift from the dead.

The inventors have passed on. But, through their creations, they continue as active producers.

If all traces of former generations were erased (including inventions, short-cut production methods and fixed wealth, like buildings and roads) it would require eight men to do the work now done by one.

This is the estimate of the celebrated engineering scientist, Alfred Korzybski.

He reasons that the world really is populated today by three different populations, all of them dynamic and active:

One—1,600,000,000 living men.

Two—10,000,000,000 living man-powers of the dead.

Three—1,600,000,000 sun man-powers.

The sun man-power locked up in coal was on earth, ready to be used, thousands of years ago when man produced only by the brute force of his muscles.

Today, with this force harnessed, one man can do the work that formerly required many.

With each generation, the standard of living advances. And each generation flatters itself that it alone is responsible for the advance.

As a matter of fact, most of the advance is a gift from the dead, the accumulation of their efforts and discoveries.

Similarly, we of this generation are preparing the standard of living for generations to follow.

Man thus operates in an unlimited expanse of time.

Human energy and productive effort are immortal.

PENALTY OF BIGNESS

Lowest bid for a new tunnel under the Hudson river at New York is $19,250,000. This is a lot of money, but New York taxpayers accept it as a matter of course.

Before boasting of advantages of civilization, check up the price we pay—the penalties for swarming together in cities.

WILL NEED SHEEP

Compared with 1910, the country has a fifth more milk cows, four-ninths fewer sheep and about 1,200,000 fewer hogs.

Meantime, population has increased more than 15 per cent. So the meat supply is low.

When good times return, for one thing, lamb, mutton and wool will be insufficient to meet demand. As economists, most of us are near-sighted, rarely planning far enough ahead.

MORE CANDIDATES

Census report says in 1920 there were 1600 husbands and 12,234 wives, 15 years old, in our country.

A big figure, but microscopically small compared with the 15-year-olds who are unmarried.

Two generations ago, or even one, a 15-year-old bride was not exceptional enough to attract attention.

Youth of both sexes now waits to get more experience and deliberates the eligible list cautiously before taking a mate.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE

Visionaries are predicting that the airplane will take the place of that auto.

A few years ago, they were predicting that the auto would "drive out the horses."

Now comes the government, reporting that the country still has 19,099,000 horses, compared with 10,833,113 in 1910.

We have about 10,000,000 motor cars, along with nearly twice as many horses as 12 years ago—and find we need both.

That will be the auto's future. Airplanes will fly by millions. Use of autos will increase. The two together will be insufficient to furnish man with enough transportation, one thing we are always behind on.

TROUSERS

Next time you see a picture of King George of England, look closely and you'll notice that he wears his trousers with creases pressed along the sides instead of front and back.

Thus he perpetuates an old custom. Time was when all men creased their trousers the same way. Seems odd to us now. But one of these days it'll be back in fashion.

CRIME INCREASES

New York state reports that the number of prisoners in its penal institutions has increased 14,914 in a year.

Reading which, you comment about the great increase in crime since the war.

But don't forget that a gain in the jail population also reveals a greater police efficiency—something to be thankful for.

A NEW BREAKFAST DISH

Do you eat vegetables for breakfast? Few do. A health bulletin says that vegetables are just as health-giving and just as necessary at breakfast as any other meal. It wonders why the stomach usually starts the day without garden stuff, especially fresh kind.

The answer is, habit, the greatest health regulator and destroyer.

Most people eat about the same breakfast every morning, never think of a change.

Review your habits. Which ones need changing?

FORWARD

If your great-great-grandfather could read and write, it made him famous for miles around. In those days, the average person couldn't even sign his name.

A census report now shows 15,300,000 American children between the ages of 7 and 13. And 13,369,000 of them are listed as attending school regularly.

The world has made more progress, for the average person, in the last 200 years than in the preceding 2000 years!

THE WAYWARD YOUTH

Youth does not change. It is the same today as yesterday. It is the parents, trainers of youth, who have changed. Hence we have jazz-life youngsters.

This is the theory of Alfred E. Stearns, principal of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

His reasoning is sound. Father in his youth would have been the same as son is today if the old-fashioned home had been put on a 1922 basis. We are the products of early-training and environment, regardless of which generation we live in.

UNCLE JOE

Uncle Joe Cannon's retirement from Congress after 46 years' public service will make a good many readers feel old.

It seems only yesterday that Uncle Joe was in his prime, his famous cigar cocked at an angle, czar-ruling the House.

What is foremost in his mind as he goes back to Danville, Ill., to bask in the sunset of life? Probably this—the tremendous change in politics and the national government since the heydays of Foraker, Penrose, McKinley, Cannon and Mark Hanna.

WATER SUPPLY COSTLY

In one year New York City has spent $169,000,000 to increase its water supply. All watersheds within 20 miles have been exhausted. Forty engineers are rushed to a greater distance, seeking new water sources.

All this is a penalty for destruction of forests. With trees gone, top soil washes away and rains and melted snows rush seaward in torrents. Drought follows flood, instead of the water supply being balanced the year-round.

Senseless destruction of forests is crippling our economic system in thousands of other ways, but none is more dangerous than the effect on water supply.

NIL NISI BONUM

A man in a group had said something critical of one who had recently died, and he turned to another to ask him if he did not agree with him.

"De mortuis nil nisi bonum," that man replied. That is, say nothing but good of the dead.

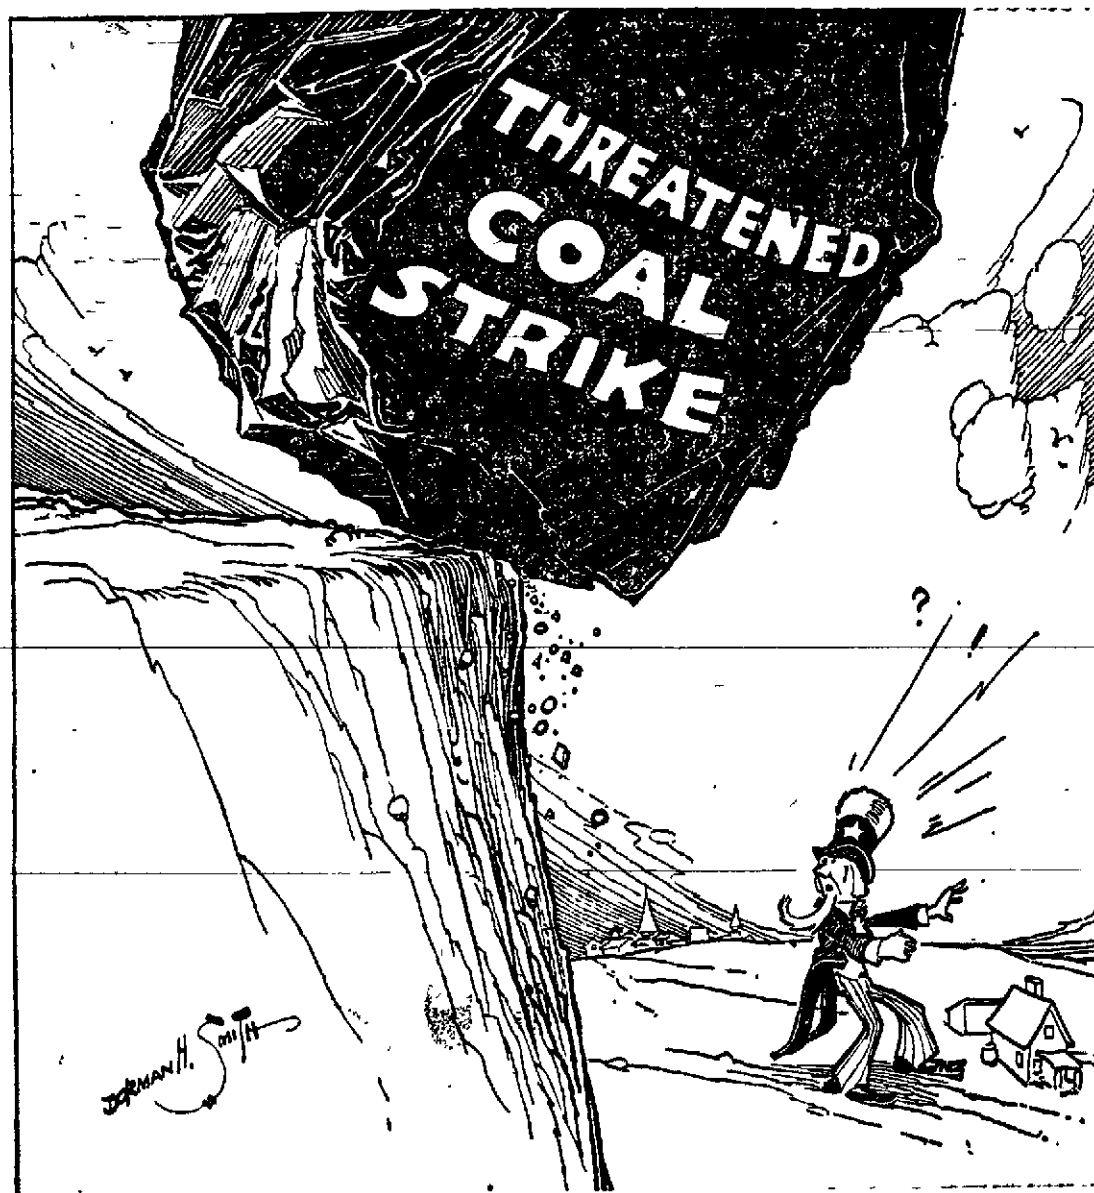

It's a good rule, and most people instinctively follow it. But another man in the group, while not denying that it is a good rule, said that he had just thought of a better one: "Say nothing but good of the living."

The dead cannot be harmed by harsh words; the living can be. Reproof cannot change the dead, nor rebuke hurt their feelings.

It is well to refrain from unkind remarks about those who are gone. But really, isn't it just as good, if not better, to refrain from unkind remarks about the living?

It would make life pleasanter and less difficult for a good many; and it would help even more those who adopted it as a rule and governed themselves by it.—Duluth Herald.

HEAVY, HEAVY HANGS OVER HIS HEAD

THE WORLD OUGHT TO KNOW WHAT U. S. STATESMEN ARE DOING, THINKING

Lieut. Col. Charles A'Court Repington, British soldier, journalist, diarist and expert in military and foreign affairs, has written especially for NEA Service, Inc., his view of America's influence in world affairs and his impressions of our leading statesmen. Having attended the disarmament conference, Col. Repington has returned again for a lecture tour. Repeating he has made a tour of Europe observing post-war conditions.

BY LIEUT. COL. CHARLES A'COURT REPINGTON.

British Foreign and Military Expert. New York, Feb. 25—America's influence in world affairs suffers because the world knows so few of America's statesmen.

Only four with big names internationally are in public life just now—Harding, Hughes, Root and Hoover.

Your statesmen rise suddenly, and then fall and disappear with regrettable rapidity. Every four years you change everything, just as Europe and the rest of the world is getting acquainted with your leaders. And we have to start all over again in our study of American policies and statesmanship.

There seems to be no permanent, and enduring political life for your statesmen as there is in Great Britain and in other European countries.

We know plenty of great Americans in private life, in diplomacy and in the business and social world. But they are known only to a small circle, and they do not figure in American politics.

Wilson we knew, but he is no longer in the front of your political stage. We knew Roosevelt, but he is gone. We know of none of the great figures among the governors of your states. I cannot find an American who can tell me the names of half a dozen.

The world ought to know what these statesmen are doing and thinking. English is a tremendous link, a bond of understanding between English-speaking countries. But co-operation would be advanced if we knew more of your great statesmen.

Your four big figures—Harding, Hughes, Root and Hoover—have made an impression upon the world.

President Harding is a very representative chief. He is a fine figure, who presents well; a great deal less of an autocrat than his predecessor, but gives one the impression of being a great force in reserve in case of future emergencies.

I admired the modesty with which he withdrew from the disarmament conference after the opening ceremonies and allowed the delegation to carry on. I hope the result will appear in the senate discussion and that he will be given time to settle up all treaties and resolutions to be given to the senate and secure ratification by Congress before he is involved, or involves America, in the next great step forward in the path of progress he may have in mind.

Secretary Hughes was misunderstood by the English. Before we came to Washington we regarded him as a frosty Caucasian who was unlikely to fall under any genial inspiration. We found him on the contrary a wise and capable statesman who had powers of conciliation which we had never been led to expect in him.

He hurt the feelings of no one. His speeches were masterly, concise, logical, and had the supreme merit of brevity. His speech on limitation of naval armament Nov. 12 was one of the greatest world events in our time.

We regard Mr. Hughes as the mouthpiece of Mr. Harding and his government. You can choose a good mouthpiece in a good mouthpiece. Mr. Hughes is a good mouthpiece. He presides over a future conference in Washington or in Europe. We are all tied up in Europe with our treaties and our engagements with our allies, while America can stand above and apart, able to fulfill the role of an arbitrator in a sense that no European nation is able to do.

Senator Root. We have profound respect for your Senator Root. His informed and balanced statesmanship has always impressed us, and the four points which he laid down as the principles of future action of the powers in China I can only describe as gems of workmanship.

Secretary Hoover. Mr. Hoover has won golden opinions throughout Europe; a master mind, with unequalled capacity for organization and for taking pains. I wonder how many tens of thousands of lives he has saved—he and all those from John D. Rockefeller downward who have made Hoover's work possible. I think that Hoover's experience is only an apprenticeship for greater work yet to be done.

Bird of Paradise Staged Last Night

Although "The Bird of Paradise," a love story of Hawaii, has been staged in Bismarck several times before, a good sized audience attended the performance at the Auditorium last evening. A large number of Mandan people were also in the city to see the play.

The play was written and directed by Richard Walton Tully and the story combines the portrayal of the simple life of the natives of Hawaii with a pleasing love story.

The play is staged in three acts. Act one opens with a scene in a beach cave and native house on the Puna Coast, Island of Hawaii. Act two pictures the same "nest" two years later. Ten days elapsed in the time between Act two and three. Act three was divided in three parts, scene one showing the cage, scene two the fight, and scene three, free dom, the house of everlasting fire. The time of the play was given as the early days of the nineties during the revolutionary days.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I know that the Lord will maintain the cause of the afflicted, and the right of the poor.—Psalm 140:12. He who intermits The appointed tasks and duties of the day, Untunes full off the pleasures of the day. Checking the finer spirits that refuse To flow, when purposes are lightly changed. —William Wordsworth.

LEARN A WORD EVERY DAY

Today's word is ABORIGINAL. It's pronounced — ab-oh-rij-i-nul with accent on the third syllable. It means—first, native, indigenous, primitive, original. It comes from Latin "ab origine," from the beginning. Companion word—aborigines. It's used like this—"The red Indians were the aboriginal inhabitants of America."

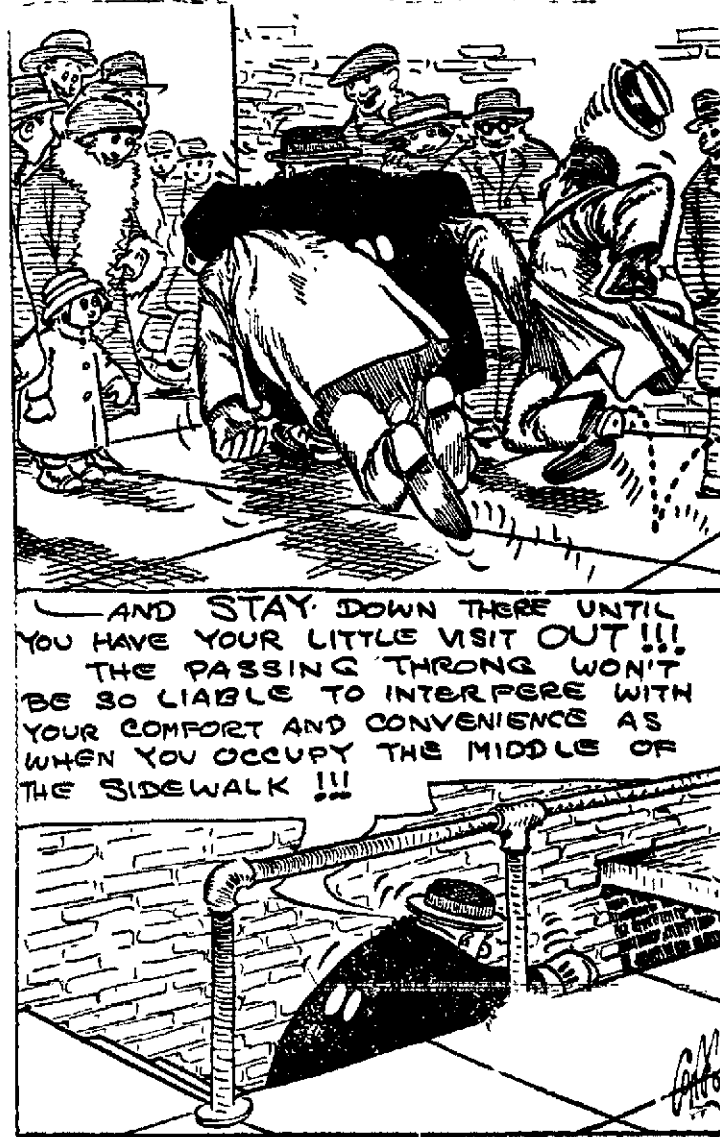

IT WENT TO THE SPOT

Lingering colds and coughs that hang on and wear one out are difficult to get rid of, but Henry E. Campbell, R. F. D. 3, Adrian, Mich., writes: "I had a bad cough for three years. Tried several cough medicines. Got little relief. I tried Foley's Honey and Tar. It went to the spot. There is no better remedy on the market." Good for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough—clears the passage; soothes irritated membranes; stops tickling in the throat. Contains no opiates. Adv.

"Not Good Enough"

(Letters to Lovers)

By WINONA WILCOX

Snobbishness is a relentless destroyer of happiness. In marriage it works its worst.

Lovers, left alone, are troubled little by it, but when the world is too much with them, when "what other people think" bothers them greatly, then lovers' worries begin.

One girl puts the problem thus: "My relatives look down on the man I'm to marry. He is considered 'not good enough' for me. His character is finer than that of my own brother, but the latter is well educated while the man I love is not."

"Will the criticisms of my family, and a big difference in our social planes spoil my marriage?"

Not necessarily; not if love is regarded as a rainbow arch uniting two lives. In illustration, consider this story, a true one, although it reads like a scenario.

"A girl, just graduated from a fashionable school, was sent for a summer. She belonged to an old and a rich family, but neither her aristocracy nor her training for the social world kept her from falling in love with a regular cowboy."

"The man had less than a grammar school education, no manners to speak of, and no art in tying a cravat. He fell in love with the girl but was silent because hopeless. By the telegraphy known to true lovers, each understood the other. Nevertheless, he let her go back east that fall without a word."

"She stayed with her parents a year, mingled with the men of her own social plane, and then, when spring came around again, she packed her trunks and wired her cowboy to meet her at a certain station."

"That was a daring decision for a girl who had been educated to respect the details of the social code."

"The ranchman required no liberal education to get the import of her telegram. He procured the marriage license and spent the day of the appointment alone in the wilderness. The boys' thought he was trying to get up courage to meet the girl; but he was a poet at heart, and perhaps he was only consecrating himself to her and to love."

"For ten years they have thought themselves the happiest two in the world. Her relatives spend a month of each year on the ranch but the cowboy husband never has adopted their ways nor competed with them on their own plane."

"He is himself. He and she share the same cross-country gallops, political opinions, books and music. And some of the poems which used to whirl in his head have lately been printed." The taste which husband and wife have in common usually outlast the more romantic qualities of their mutual attraction. These tastes as a rule survive to make them companionable in old age when love has cooled. They are the true tests of the rightness of any marriage.

The cowboy and the society girl of the above story loved poetry, and the mountains, the horses and cattle, the sky, grass and rivers, the sage and sand. She was cultured, the man uneducated, but he knew and she knew that "a man's a man, for a that."

Between 400 and 500 persons weekly last year crossed the British channel by airplane.

EXPLORER'S BODY IS TO BE BURIED IN ICY REGIONS

Will Be Accompanied To "Gateway To The Antarctic" By Captain Hussey

ONE HUNDRED MILES LONG

South Georgia Island Has Figured Several Times In Shackleton's Career

New York, Feb. 25 — Grytviiken, chosen by Lady Shackleton as the last resting place for the body of her late husband, Sir Ernest Shackleton, British explorer who died aboard his tiny craft "Quest" last January 5, is an icebound, isolated habitation of 20 persons who cling to the frozen shores of South Georgia island, called the "Gateway to the Antarctic."

Sir Ernest's body was brought from the Antarctic to Montevideo following his death and will be accompanied by Captain Frank Hussey, a member of Shackleton's expedition, when it starts again on its journey into the Polar regions.

Lady Shackleton's decision to halt removal of the body to England is in accordance with a lifelong wish of the explorer that he be laid to rest amid the scenes where his life work had been carried on. Only at the outset of his last voyage, he told friends he wanted "to die with his boots on, like an old sea-dog."

South Georgia island has figured several times in Shackleton's career. He served under Captain R. F. Scott in 1901 when that intrepid pioneer into the icefields of the south made a dash from that island which resulted in discovery of the south magnetic pole.

A Dangerous Haven

One hundred miles long, with a rocky, forbidding coast line so indented that its width varies from 20 miles to only one-half mile, most of its mountainous interior is covered with ice and snow throughout the year. Huge ice cliffs overhang its fjords and bays and great icebergs breaking off from massive glaciers make it a dangerous haven for the occasional wandering whaling ships which touch its shores.

The island was discovered in 1675 by Anthony LaRoche, Captain Cook, in 1775, took possession in the name of the British empire. Until more than 100 years later, when it was visited by a German expedition aboard the "Moeske," it remained unexplored, but the presence of herds of seals and sea lions made it the occasional rendezvous of whalers for the first few years of this century, until the animals there became nearly extinct. Ducks, pigeons and Arctic fowl still are numerous on the island.

It was while drifting with the ice past the settlement of Grytviiken, bound toward the midnight sun on a voyage of exploration which was to have covered 30,000 miles, that Shackleton suddenly died. His comrades removed his body from the "Quest" to a Norwegian whaler bound for Montevideo and continued the expedition under the leadership of sub-commander Frank Wild.

They headed in the direction of the "lost" Endeavor land, a vague country just south of South Georgia island which was reported discovered 90 years ago, but which no one has been able to locate since.

Whalers Make Coffin

Shackleton's body has been placed in a plain wooden coffin, made by the whalers at Grytviiken, and hermetically sealed with zinc. It will be placed in a rock-piled cairn, among the mounds marking the graves of other explorers, adventurers and whalers who lost their lives at the "Gateway to the Antarctic."

A simple burial ceremony will be held in the crude church at Grytviiken, with only Captain Hussey, of Shackleton's work of admirers, to see that his wishes and the commands of Lady Shackleton are carried out.

A WILD SCHEME TO INVADGE AND SUBDUE PERSIA

Little Army of 200 Georgian Invaders Masqueraded as Persian Women

Baku, Azerbaijan, Feb. 25.—One of the recent Communist attempts to invade Persia and capture Teheran, its capital, has most of the elements of a comic opera.

The little army of 200 Georgian invaders masqueraded as Persian women by wearing loose veils and other clothing of women over their uniforms.

The queer appearance of the expedition aroused the suspicions of the "Cheks" when it reached Enzeli, a Persian Sea, and the whole outfit was arrested and taken back to Baku for examination.

Released, the invaders set out afresh and advanced into the mountains half way to Teheran where the peasants arose against them and drove them out.

The exploit is celebrated even here among the many mad political and military adventures which characterized the struggle of the British and Russians to capture the Persian capital.

It was headed by Simoyak Phakadze who conceived the brilliant idea of the masquerade and who still maintains that his plan was a good one. He is a son-in-law of Rasputin, the once celebrated Russian monk who was murdered after having attained ascendancy over the Russian court.

A Georgian by birth, he was for a time, a hanger-on at the Petrograd court but joined the Communist movement in 1916 and thus escaped the fate that he might otherwise have suffered because of his favor in imperial circles.

He came here with the red title in the spring of 1920, helped to overthrow the Azerbaijan republic and then undertook his wild scheme to invade and subdue Persia with a disguised army.

ASKS TRUSTEE BE NAMED FOR "LEMKE FUND"

true facts and circumstances with reference to the amount of the said Lemke Fund, and the purposes for which the same has been used by them, at all times fraudulently failed, refused and neglected to make any accounting whatsoever or to state to the donors of said fund, or to the plaintiff herein, the beneficiary thereof, the amount of the same, the purposes for which the said fund has been used, the balance left therein, and the disposition made of said balance."

The attorney general alleges that there are still pending in the courts or before the Interstate Commerce Commission several matters which "are of the class of cases and litigation for the carrying on of which the Lemke Trust was created." These cases follow:

Farmers Grain Co. of Embuden, et al. vs. William Lemke, et al., and Homer Farmers Elevator Co. vs. William Lemke, et al., both submitted fully in the supreme court of the United States; American Railway Express Co. vs. State Board of Railroad Commissioners, involving express rates and may have to be presented in the supreme court of the United States; Chicago and Northwestern Railway company, et al. vs. William Lemke, et al.; Chicago and Northwestern Railway company, et al. vs. William Lemke, et al.; The State of North Dakota ex. rel. William Lemke, Attorney General, vs. The United States of America, et al.

Another paragraph of the complaint alleges that former Attorney General Lemke used money from the appropriation of $10,000 made by the legislature to be used in the Minnesota drainage case, for the railroad rate case and the grain grading case, when there was still money in the Lemke fund which should have been used under the terms of the trust. Lemke paid out of this fund $2,946.10 to K. K. Gartner and $1,635.22 to Beth Richardson, the complaint says, "that such charges were improperly made against said appropriation, but should have been paid for out of the Lemke fund aforesaid, had the defendant carried out the trust faithfully according to its terms."

It is alleged that William Lemke, when attorney general, expended lavishly and extravagantly thousands of dollars of money appropriated for the use of the department and that the attorney general's fund is because of this expenditure greatly depleted.

Attorney General Johnson, in the suit, decrees the "Lemke Fund" a trust fund and the State of North Dakota the beneficiary.

2. That there be declared a vacancy to exist in the trust, since William Lemke has been removed from office.

3. That Treasurer John Steen be designated trustee, and be required under the direction of the court to disburse the fund "for the purpose and uses intended by the donors."

4. That Legkie, F. W. Cathro, Fred Wing, The Courier-News, be required to account to the trustee for every dollar in the fund.

5. That the Bank of North Dakota and F. W. Cathro be required to deliver to the trustee all records, documents, drafts, and checks upon the fund.

6. That the new trustee be directed to draw upon the fund to pay vouchers and bills incurred in defending and prosecuting the rate cases and lawsuits intended to be prosecuted and defended by the donors.

7. That funds appropriated by the legislature for the use of the office of attorney general and from which money was drawn by Lemke to pay claims contracted in the said rate and grain grading cases be replenished from the Lemke Trust fund to the extent of the withdrawals.

The case may be heard in the district court in the April of May terms.

$500.00 SPOT CASH.

Will buy my equity in a quarter section farm land two miles from the Youngtown Creamery, seven miles north of New Salem, where the Holstein Dairy Cow has made good and light gains, barely scratched, hold future promise.

According to the lowest possible estimate this equity is worth $1400.

If figured according to what farmers in this immediate vicinity are asking for similar land this equity is worth $2,800.

Or, if figured like land that has been sold to the Bismarck public in the shape of "Coal Mine Stock," this equity is worth $45,400.

When you buy this equity you become owner of millions of tons of coal. Some insurance policy if you have the courage and the backbone to look twenty years ahead!

BASKETBALL GAMES FOR COMING WEEK

Number of Leading Teams Are Not "Billed" For The Week End

RESTING UP FOR MAR. 10-11

(By the Associated Press)

Basketball play this week, especially among the high school squads, tapers down toward the end of the playing season. A number of the leading teams are not scheduled for the week end as a means of resting themselves for the strenuous two days of tournament engagements, March 10 and 11. This is especially true of the high schools of the northern half of the state although Crosby and Berthold are announced to stage the most important game of the year to the participating teams, unless the two happen to meet in some of the contests leading up to it. Both teams have lost few games since the first of this year and the supporters of the winner will feel their team has annexed some honors in the northwest part of the state.

Another northern game, in which there is interest is the meeting of Bowbells and Donnybrook, while the meeting of Grafton of the north and Wahpeton of the south should insure a well matched contest.

The southern half of the state has Valley City taking its last workout before the tournament in a game at Cooperstown, while Bismarck goes west to meet Dickinson and Glendive, Montana. Bismarck has won from each one of these teams on the home floor and is expecting a warm reception from their hosts.

A. C. and U. to Meet.

The games announced for the week end are:

February 27 — Fargo College at Concordia.

February 28 — Valley City Teachers at State Science.

CLEAN YOUR SIDEWALKS

The heavy drifts from the last storm have made it impossible for the city snow plow to properly clean the sidewalks. Therefore, the property owners are requested to have the sidewalks cleaned by Tuesday morning. If this request is not complied with, the city will clean the same and assess the cost to property owners, as provided by state law and city ordinance.

JACK DEMPSEY PRAISES MANAGER

Champion Jack Dempsey and his manager Jack Kearns.

Jack Kearns, who manages Jack Dempsey, is known as one of the most successful managers in the fight game. In fistie circles, the first thing to do to be a successful manager is to get a chance to handle a champion. The second thing is to get the champion real money for his bouts. When it comes to getting money, Kearns is just about the last word. Dempsey's share of his fight with Carpenter amounted to only $300,000. With Dempsey, whatever Kearns says is law. As a matter of fact, Dempsey gives his manager much of the credit for the success the champion has won.

At one stage of his career Dempsey was ill set to quit the fight game. Kearns had a difficult time to convince him that he had a big future but finally won him over.

Likewise Dempsey gives Kearns all the credit for the great left-hand the champion has developed. At one time Dempsey was purely a right-handed fighter. Kearns, however, kept after him to develop a left. He used every method possible, and finally got results. Dempsey's left hand is now as much feared as his right.

SMALL COLLEGES HAVE STARTED ALL TROUBLE

Northwestern Coach Claims Professionalism in Baseball Is a Great Menace to the Leading Institutions

By GLEN THISTLEWAITE (Football Coach, Northwestern University.)

Overeagerness on the part of smaller institutions to make a showing in the athletic world has proved to be a disturbing element in college and scholastic circles.

Crack baseball or football teams cause a college to be much advertised through the medium of the press. This is a much desired asset to the smaller institutions.

In an effort to get together such teams some of the smaller colleges have given tuition, room and board free to star scholastic athletes. In some cases the boys have been compensated, usually, however, by having them work a few hours at some job.

The bigger colleges, with established reputations, never recruit athletes in such a manner. Sometimes the alumni of a college pull such a stunt, but surely the college should not be blamed for such an act.

If a certain high school team boasts a star athlete, it is only natural for a college man to try to induce that player to enter his college when he graduates from high school. That is loyalty. Sometimes the alumni of certain colleges make it possible for a star athlete to be financially rewarded. That practice is, of course, questionable.

The big evil is summer baseball. Permitting the athletes to take pay for playing ball when not in college would remove that evil.

Professional football is not nearly so serious a menace as baseball. No athlete during the school year should be allowed to play with an outside team. During that period they should be placed on their honor.

Professionalism in baseball is a great menace to the leading institutions.

SPORT SPLINTERS

Bing Miller, traped by Washington to Philadelphia, is something of a humorist. He looks for a big improvement in his hitting, as he says he always could swat them on a minor league club.

That the Detroit club is hard pressed for infield material is proved by the fact the Tigers claimed the veteran Gerse Cutshaw, for second after all the other National League clubs had waived on him. Cutshaw had a pretty fair year with the Pirates in 1921.

Contrary to the belief that exists in some quarters, the ball that is used in the American and National Leagues is identical in material and construction.

If Bobby Roth's knee is in good shape he has a great chance to make himself solid with the New York fans. Roth will probably be called upon to substitute for Ruth until Babe's suspension is lifted. Bobby always gets away good in the spring and when he gets hold of a fast ball he can certainly give it a ride.

The St. Louis Cardinals intend to use the Cleveland shift at first base this year. Jack Fournier will play when a left-hander is working for the opposition and Del Gainer against right-handers. The two are former

SPEED, NOT TRICKS, HIS BEST ASSET

Dave Danforth Claims His Large Hand Enables Him To Sail the Ball Without Roughing It, as Batters Claim

BY DAVE DANFORTH

If a pitcher is able to get a good hop on his fast ball, the batters immediately insist that he is cheating. I have always been fortunate enough to have a pretty good fast ball. For years has gained for me the reputation of being a cheater.

In baseball being a cheater is for a pitcher to make use of some illegal means to get a hop on his fast ball. Use of emery paper, or any other method of roughening the ball will produce such a result.

Opposing batters have never given me credit for having any brains. Any success that I have had on the ball field has always been credited to illegal methods.

While I am not trying to pose as a "Christ" Mathewson, still I feel that I am able to pitch intelligently. At least I feel that I am able to match wits with most batters and get away with it.

Ever since I joined the majors, and in the minors as well, I have been accused of trickery to get results. I feel that such an attitude on the part of the players has had considerable to do with what little success I have had.

When I am selected to pitch, opposing players usually go right up in the air. They figure the "old cheater" is going to work, and it is up to them to discover what I am doing with the ball.

Batters Are Suspicious

When I am doing the pitching, most of the batters turn detectives for a day. Instead of swinging at my stuff they are too busy trying to figure how I am doing the ball. The old psychology of the game enters into it. The batters quit concentrating on their hitting.

My fast ball hasn't nearly as much stuff on it as most batters insist. They are always looking for something different when I slip them a fast ball, and then I fan them with the most ordinary offerings. I have seen batters miss a third strike, a fast ball as straight as a string, and insist that it jumped six inches.

I pitch just like any other ordinary individual. I use speed, a slow ball and a curve. Now and then I am able to make a fast ball "sail," as we say in baseball, which means it takes an unusual hop.

However, the unusual hop that I get on my fast ball every now and then is not the result of trickery. I have a large pair of hands, long tapering fingers and am able to get a good grip on the ball.

In making it sail I hold the ball on the ends of my fingers, and let it go in such a manner that it produces the desired result, a hop on the fast one.

Never Mars the Ball

I never mar a ball. Occasionally I rub the ball down the side of my trousers, as is often done by such pitchers as Shocker of St. Louis, Mays of New York, Leonard of Detroit and a number of others.

I have been credited with having everything, but brains. Anyhow I manage to outsmart them enough to win a lot of ball games.

When the Chicago White Sox dropped me I felt pretty badly. I don't believe I ever should have been dropped from the majors. Too much work in the bull pen robbed me of my fast ball.

I made up my mind to prove that a lot of fellows made a mistake when I was waived out of both major leagues. I think I have succeeded.

Favors Lifting Ban On Summer Ball

BY HOWARD JONES, Director of Athletics, Iowa University.

Professionalism has no place in college athletics.

I certainly would be opposed to anything which would permit professionals to compete on college teams.

However, I believe that the class A universities have made such strict scholastic rules that the danger of a professional competing in these universities is extremely slight.

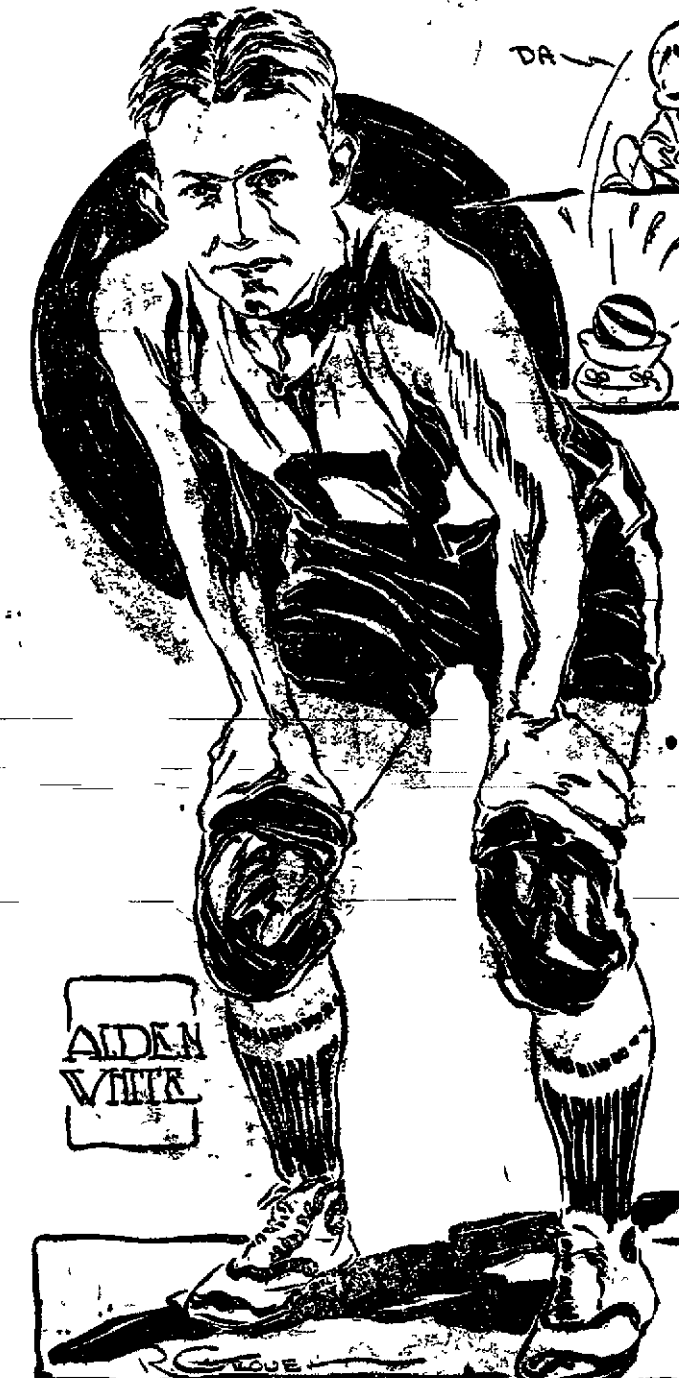

In the first place a man in order to play on a baseball team in any conference school must have been in residence over a period of one and one-half years, and must have completed full work in the last two semesters of this time, which of course covers the period of one year.

Personally I can see no more wrong in a man earning some money in the summer playing baseball to help him through his college course, than I can see in singers going out on a Chautauqua circuit.

Of course the matter is one entirely for the university authorities to decide, but I am of the opinion that the general sentiment throughout the various faculties, and general public sentiment is in favor of permitting the college boy to play baseball in the summer for money.

If a rule should be established whereby boys would play in the summer, under certain modifications, I

STAR SCHOLASTIC ATHLETE

Fifty-five field baskets in two games. That is the record recently made by Alden White, star forward of the Crosby High team of Waterbury, Conn.

White is the sensation of eastern scholastic basketball circles. His work has featured every game in which his team has played.

Crosby High, which finished third in the national tourney at Chicago last year, has run rough-shod over its eastern opponents during the present season.

certainly would be in favor in combination with this of a rule prohibiting any athlete from participation from the time he registers in the college until he leaves the school in June.

COMET GOLF LATEST FAD

Western Golfer Has Unique Idea for Playing in Snow

By BILLY EVANS

When the old golf germ gets you, it hits hard.

It is no longer a six months' sport, but an all-year-round game.

Those fortunate enough to be able to go south or to the coast during the winter find plenty of inviting golf courses.

The city of Miami, Florida, boasts five courses, and, as a result, gets a big play, since the climate of Miami is always favorable for golfing.

There are some dyed-in-the-wool golf bugs who play the game up north the year round by using the red ball. This is possible unless the snow gets too deep.

From Portland, Ore., comes a tale of a new way to overcome the snow hazard. In that section of the country there seldom is enough snow to prevent golfing all winter.

Recently a severe snowstorm temporarily halted the golf game. It was too deep for the use of the red ball, which usually answers the purpose of winter golf.

E. T. Parker of Portland is a golfer who hates to have even the snow interfere with his game. He set about to invent a contrivance that would overcome the snow hazard.

Parker conceived the idea of driving a tack into the ball and tying a red twine about two feet long to the tack. The ball was tied with the tail of twine in front, so that it would not catch the shaft of the club in driving. The improvised tail diagrammed the course of the ball after it struck the snow covered ground.

Eighteen holes were played and not ball field. One day a player is a real hero because he won a game through some remarkable play. The next day he is a dud when he loses the game because of some misplay.

When a champion is at the height of his career, he is the most talked about individual in the country.

However, when a champion loses his crown, and drops out of the public eye, he is soon forgotten. The sporting public is mighty fickle.

During his pugilistic heyday Young Corbett was one of the most colorful fighters in the game. Corbett furnished plenty of copy for the newspapers because he was decidedly original.

Many of the fight fans of today have forgotten about Young Corbett. Those of the older school, while having a keen remembrance of some of his great fights, have no idea as to the present whereabouts of the man who was once the idol of the prize ring.

In his day Terry McGovern was a great little fighter. There was something about Terry's style that made a hit with you. He was a real fighter who never gave an inch, who carried the fight to his opponent from the tap of the going to the end of the round.

McGovern was a popular hero. He was regarded as invincible. And then there came out of the west a young man by the name of William Rothwell, who had taken the name of Young Corbett as his ring monicker.

Young Corbett was matched with Terry McGovern. No one conceded Corbett a chance. Terry would surely knock him out, was the verdict of all the experts.

The bout was staged at Hartford, Conn. Corbett knocked out McGovern in two rounds. It was one of the most sensational bouts in the history of the ring.

He had come from the west practically unheralded and in two short rounds had beaten down the great McGovern, "Terrible Terry." He was offered fabulous sums by promoters to box and fancy salaries by rival theatrical producers.

In a few short years Corbett made perhaps a quarter of a million dollars. That was some money in those days. He lost most of his money as quickly as he made it.

So-called friends found him easy to touch. He bet on horses that ran last, and was a fall guy for the wheel. When he lost to Jimmy Britt it was the turning point in his career.

From then on he didn't seem to care. He slipped rapidly as a fighter and was soon in the has-been class. His ability and most of his money was gone. Broadway, which owed him a living, has treated him rather shabbily.

Now, after 21 years on Broadway, he is going back home. Going back to his dad who owns a little farm outside of Denver. He is tired of Broadway and the bright lights.

Young Corbett told his story to Charles Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants, the other day. Stoneham staked him to a roll. Young Corbett has bid Broadway goodbye. It made him and broke him.

Is the public interested in a match between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills?

Wm. A. Brady has come forward with an offer of $200,000 for a meeting between the two men.

Dempsey is the champion heavyweight of the world. Wills is conceded to be the greatest negro fighter at the heavyweight limit.

Is there a demand for a meeting between the two men? Certainly no other fighter in the game today has a better chance to win from Dempsey than Wills.

Talk of another meeting between Dempsey and Carpenter is ridiculous. Of course, no one can blame Dempsey for looking on such a bout with favor as it would be soft picking.

Possibly the foreign critics can bunk the fight fans on the other side into enthusing over such a match. However, I have my doubts about it.

I saw the Dempsey-Carpenter fight. Carpenter showed a dangerous right hand. He had Dempsey in trouble once but only for a few moments. Carpenter is simply physically unfitted to cope with the champion.

Jack Kearns, who is managing Dempsey, is quoted in a news item, saying he didn't look on the proposed match with favor.

Kearns is reported to have said that Dempsey hasn't drawn the color line, that he has no fear of meeting Lewis, but that both he and Dempsey believe it is a risky business proposition. Kearns says he doesn't believe the public would support the match.

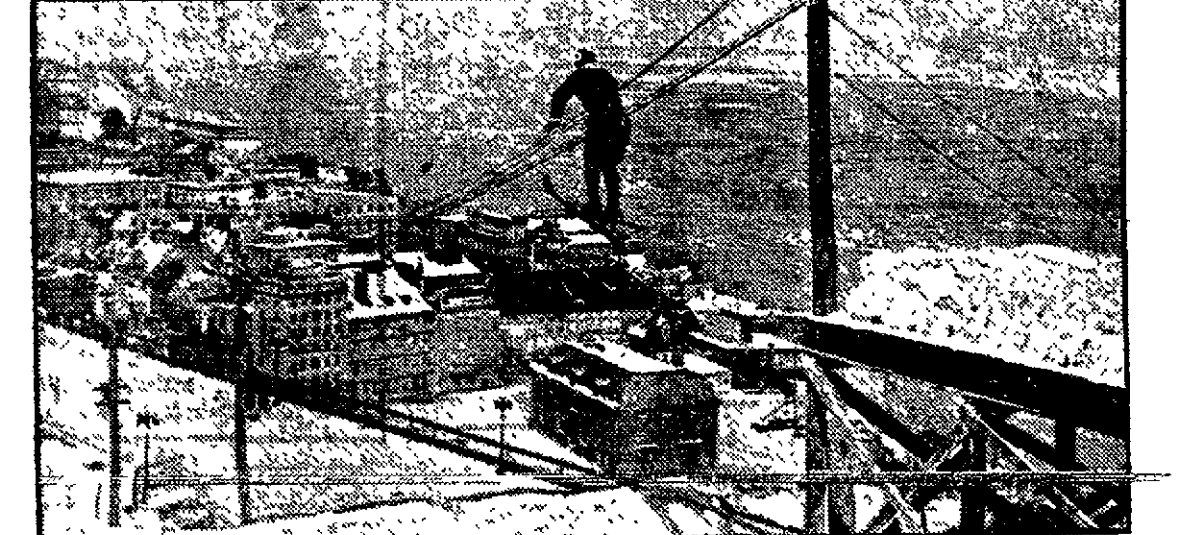

That is a rather funny statement, when one considers the proposition made by Wm. A. Brady. The New York promoter guarantees Dempsey $150,000 and Wills $50,000. Why should Kearns worry as to whether or not the bout would draw, just so long as he gets his money?

At Toledo Dempsey punched Bill Tate in sparring bouts as he pleased. Tate, it seems, made things interesting for Wills. Dempsey shouldn't fear Wills. In all probability he doesn't. All of which makes the statement of Jack Kearns rather hard to understand.

Average women have heads broader in proportion to their length, and darker eyes and hair than men.

Whale's skin is so thick it can be split into several layers.
